MARYLAND EDUCATION EFFORTS

Standards: As a result of state education reform initiatives over the last five years, Maryland has become known for having high standards. Education Week's report card gave Maryland in Standards and Assessments a 100% rating. Part of the state's education reform efforts included developing a test called the Maryland School Performance Assessment Program (MSPAP), which measures how well students are meeting these standards by testing their reading, writing, language, math, science, and social studies skills. The Administration's proposal for national voluntary tests in reading and math is very compatible with the MSPAP.

Charter Schools: There are no serious charter schools bills pending in the legislature, although there are advocates for charter schools legislation in the legislature and on the State Board of Education. Chris Cross, the President of the Maryland State Board of Education and several other Board members have been attempting to promote charter schools legislation for the past year. However, this proposal ran into opposition from the Public School Superintendent's Association of Maryland and the Maryland Association of Boards of Education. A Task Force appointed by the State Board of Education concluded that local school boards already had sufficient authority to establish charter schools -- and several have been established in Baltimore City. Consequently, there are no current proposals in the legislature to authorize charter schools, though most advocates of charter schools believe legislation is needed in order to see any widespread development of new charter schools.

Hope Scholarship: Governor Glendening introduced legislation to create the Maryland Hope Scholarship which will provide tuition, mandatory fees, and a book allowance to students who graduate from a Maryland high school with a "B" average and whose family income is below $60,000.

NOTE:

Baltimore City funding controversy: The state legislature will soon have to decide whether to approve a proposed settlement of a suit brought by Baltimore against the State, alleging unlawful disparities in school financing. Under the terms of the settlement, Baltimore will receive an additional $40 million per year from the state in each of the next five years. In exchange, Baltimore will accept a new school board, which will be jointly appointed by the Mayor of Baltimore and the Governor of Maryland from a pool of candidates recommended by the State Board of Education. Legislators from Montgomery and Prince George's Counties have objected to the proposed settlement, arguing that it gives too much money to Baltimore. It is currently impossible to predict whether the state legislature will approve the settlement.

FYI: In addition to the brain and volunteer meetings, the CEB is in the planning stages of a White House Community Empowerment Conference tentatively scheduled for some time during the week of April 15th in Detroit.

I imagine that once the CEB Director is final then their conference plans will follow suit.

I am involved in their planning process and we are all on the same page in trying to link these three major April conferences in some way.

I think we can certainly suggest that they wait until at least May or June. I agree that it may be potential overload - particularly if there is not significant action at each event - per SOTU. However moving the EZ/EC conference would require a conversation with Kumiki. I know their plans aren't firm and won't be until the Director situation is setteled. You may have a better sense on the timing of that.

Elena -- Two things I need from you, if possible:

- 1) Is this NSC conference on treaties and implications for indigenous people happening tomorrow morning and did you say you had some printed material that I can look at?
- 2) Can you help secure a recommendation from Bruce on a memo on the detention of Golden Venture migrants?

I am dropping off a copy of a memo on detained migrants from the Golden Venture that I forwarded for decision to Bruce during a very busy time for him and I don't think he was able to get to it. NSC did not send it up to the President yet, but asked again today if Bruce could make a recommendation by tomorrow morning so they could move it along tomorrow. This is a tough issue, but I think the material I provided to Bruce and am dropping off with you set it out pretty clearly. I have added a NYT's editorial from this weekend (arguing for a reassessment of detention in light of the new legislation and length of time detained) and a recent article that provides some more context. This is on the President's radar screen -- Rep. Goodling has raised this with the President several times, most recently on the day of the State of the Union and they have a follow-up conversation planned on this issue, I understand. This memo follows an earlier memo on this topic to which the President requested the views of the V.P. and Panetta. NSC wants to know whether Bruce would support Carol's recommendation in the earlier memo for supervised release or wants to impose continued detention. Let me know if you need more.

Thanks

Health Care Reforms

- As we constrain growth in the Medicare and Medicaid programs through long overdue payment and structural reforms, my budget also makes modest but important investments in improving the health care system.
- Specifically, the budget includes targeted and capped investments to expand coverage to two groups of deserving Americans: children and workers between jobs.
 - Almost 10 million children are uninsured. Because almost half of all children who become uninsured do so because their parent has lost or changed a job, these initiatives include a provision to provide premiums assistance for children and their parents who are in-between jobs. They are targeted and capped, and will also cover up to 5 million children and over 2 million adult workers (and their spouses).
- States can best identify and reach out to their citizens in need of health insurance. As such, all of our coverage expansions would be administered by the states.
- It is important that we can show the nation that we can work together to give working Americans the help they need to purchase health insurance. These initiatives aim to both reduce the unacceptable levels of people without insurance and make for a more health, stable workforce.
- Avoid engaging on specific approaches to expanding coverage, particularly tax credits.

Child health tax credits: While the Republicans and the Democratic Leadership is interested in expanding coverage through tax deductions/credits, serious questions have been raised about whether they would be effective or administratively feasible. Many believe that they would simply give public dollars to people who are already paying for insurance, resulting in little new coverage. We are open, however, to thinking about how to combine a tax credit with other more effective options, like a Medicaid buy-in program or the grants to states.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE HEADS OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES

SUBJECT: Federal Policies Targeted to Children in Their Earliest Years

Over the past few years, scientific research has demonstrated that the earliest years of life -- before children reach school-age -- are critical to cognitive and emotional development. We know that emotional nourishment, good nutrition, proper health care, intellectual stimulation and parental and community support during the first years of life form the foundation for a child's ability to learn, thrive in school, work productively and contribute fully to society.

Across the federal government, we are making great strides to enhance development during the earliest years of life, before a child reaches school, by investing in research, educating parents and caregivers, and supporting programs that provide early intervention to disadvantaged families. I am committed to accelerating our efforts to target the earliest years of life. We all have a stake in ensuring that every child is given the opportunity to fulfill his or her God-given potential.

Today, I am directing the heads of executive departments and agencies to report to me in thirty days with:

1. a comprehensive list and assessment of existing projects and programs that target the earliest years of life -- including any qualitative or quantitative evidence of success, as well as current funding level and number of clients served -- and a description of proposed improvements, if any are needed, to such projects and programs;
2. a comprehensive list and assessment of planned projects and programs that target the earliest years of life, including projected funding levels and number of clients to be served; and
3. specific proposals of additional projects and programs that could be undertaken to target the earliest years of life.

Wednesday, 2/26 Director Raines before the Joint Economic Committee

CONGRESS TODAY (2/10):

SENATE:

The Senate today resumed consideration of the Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution: Senator Wellstone offered an amendment to provide that under-privileged youth not be treated inequitably. A vote on his amendment will occur around 3:00 pm on Tuesday. The Senate then resumed consideration of a Durbin amendment, which would have allowed for a waiver of the article "for any fiscal year in which there is an economic recession or serious emergency" as declared by a joint resolution, with a majority in both Houses. The Senate tabled the amendment by a vote of 64 to 35.

HOUSE:

No legislative business

CONGRESS TOMORROW (2/11)

SENATE:

Continue consideration of the Balanced Budget Amendment (BBA) to the Constitution. Around 3:00 pm, after 60 minutes of debate, the Senate will hold a vote on the Wellstone amendment, which provides that under-privileged youth not be treated inequitably. Also on Tuesday, the Senate will likely consider and vote on the nomination of Bill Richardson as U.S. Representative to the United Nations.

HOUSE:

Convene at 12:30 pm for morning business, and legislative business at 2:00 pm. No Votes

HOUSE RULES COMMITTEE:

At 1:30 pm, the House Rules Committee will convene to consider H.J.Res. 2, the term limits constitutional amendment, and H.R. 581, Providing the President may make funds appropriated for population planning programs available on March 1, 1997, subject to restrictions on foreign organizations that perform or actively promote abortions.

CONGRESS THE REMAINDER OF THE WEEK (2/12-2/14):

SENATE

Wednesday, 2/12 and Thursday 2/13:
Continue consideration of the BBA

HOUSE

Wednesday, 2/12 and Thursday 2/13:

MEMORANDUM FOR ERSKINE BOWLES

FROM: GENE SPERLING
BRUCE REED

SUBJECT: “Choice” No-Fault Auto Insurance

Both you and the President independently asked us to look into whether the “choice” no-fault auto insurance plan devised by Jeffrey O’Connell and Michael Horowitz, supported by Senator Dole in last year’s election, and now proposed for implementation in New Jersey by Governor Whitman might be something we would think a good idea as a matter of policy. Our preliminary response is that the Administration should not reject the plan out of hand -- it has positive features, including some that go beyond premium reduction, that suggest a closer policy look is appropriate. During the 1970s, the Carter Administration supported national no-fault. There is still staff at Commerce and DOT who were part of that effort and have some expertise in the field. Before deciding to pursue any form of no-fault, we should bring these agencies into the process.

What is no-fault?

No-fault auto insurance is essentially first party coverage: if you’re injured in an auto accident, your carrier pays for your injuries¹ and your right to sue the other party (if there is one) is either non-existent (“pure” no-fault) or circumscribed. Almost all no-fault policies get their savings from the fact that only economic damages are covered -- no pain and suffering. No state has pure no fault. Depending on how you count, about 13 states and Puerto Rico have some form of no-fault. In New York and Michigan, which have tough verbal thresholds to get into court, it is reasonably effective in holding down costs and keeping cases out of court (although New York premiums are high for other reasons). In other states, with weak verbal or dollar thresholds, or a right to choose to litigate after an accident, it has been less effective.

“Choice” no-fault is a system under which drivers would be given the option of choosing either a pure no-fault policy with fairly high policy limits (e.g., $250,000) but no access to court or a more expensive policy which allowed court access but in which the policy-holder’s insurance company would -- as is the case with uninsured motorist coverage today -- pay, no matter who was at fault. Governor Whitman has proposed a variation of this system. There would be four policies: pure no-fault at the $250,000 level (which would have a premium reduction of 20-25%); pure no-fault with a pain and suffering add-on, but on a first party basis (which would result in a premium reduction of about 8%); no-fault but with access to court with a high verbal threshold (reduction unstated but should be some); and the traditional second-party liability system with unfettered access to court.

Problems and opportunities

The usual rationale for moving to no-fault is that it drives down insurance premiums, and the usual response is that it unfairly keeps injured parties from exercising their constitutional right to access to court. A collateral argument is that first party systems "punish" both good drivers and bad drivers who get into accidents, whereas the current system places the burden on the bad driver. This set of arguments does not tell the whole story.

Flaws in the Argument in Favor

Theoretically, no-fault should reduce automobile insurance premiums. A 1996 study by the Rand Institute for Civil Justice concluded that pure no-fault would reduce personal injury premiums by about 60%, and total premiums -- after taking into account the 50% of the typical premium that is for property coverage -- by about 30%. There are several reasons this has not been borne out in practice in the states that have adopted no-fault, and some additional reasons why certain states are likely to benefit less in any event.

- As noted above, no state has pure no-fault. Where there are weak verbal thresholds or dollar thresholds, not only do cases continue to get to court, but there is pressure to inflate medical expenses to go over the limits.
- While legal costs are a significant part of the premium dollar, other costs are important too in determining how fast premiums go up, such as the rate of increase in medical costs (leaving aside any impact of no-fault on these costs). Moreover, automobile insurance is a competitive business in most states and insurance companies regularly cycle through periods of declining and rising premiums.
- In states with a very high proportion of single-car accidents -- i.e., most rural states -- no-fault does not change the complexion of the payout system, and therefore should not have much effect on premiums. You can't sue a tree. Rand claims that the proportion of uninsured motorists doesn't matter much, but admits they don't really know.
- Even Rand, generally supportive of no-fault, admits that the most seriously injured individuals will probably get less compensation than under the current system. (The least seriously injured will cease being overcompensated.)

Additional benefits from no-fault

Even if there were no premium reduction, however, no-fault might have other benefits:

- As a medical matter, people who are injured who receive high quality medical and rehabilitative treatment quickly are more likely to recover fully. By keeping cases out of court, no-fault reduces the temptation to keep the plaintiff injured for the jury. Moreover, it provides the money to get the rehabilitation that's needed.
- This was important in the 1970s, but probably has gotten even more important since because:
 - Fewer people have medical insurance today; and
 - Seatbelt and airbags save lives, but those saved are often severely injured.
- High verbal threshold no-fault probably reduces fraud in the medical care system, and should reduce volume pressures on the civil justice system.

Flaws in the Opposition

The part of the argument in opposition that is stated in constitutional terms is basically unanswerable, except to note that in general not everyone has access to the civil justice system because of the cost and time involved in using the system. (The efforts of Republicans to get rid of contingency fees and institute loser pays would, of course, exacerbate this problem, and undoubtedly no-fault's opponents will lump any support on our part with these changes we oppose.) Portions of their argument relating to the lack of reduction in premiums in no-fault states or the fact that many rural states have much lower premiums than no-fault states ignore the different economics of the states and/or the problems related to low thresholds, but clearly need to be taken into account in determining the practical real-life impact of adopting no-fault.

Subject: Affirmative Action Meeting

Sylvia asked me to invite you to a meeting on affirmative action this Thursday, February 13, 1997 at 1 p.m. The meeting should last about an hour. In addition to yourself, Wade Henderson, Weldon Latham, Rep. Maxine Waters, and Marcia Greenberger will be attending. White House staff will include Kumiki Gibson, Al Maldon (White House Legislative Affairs), Dawn Chirwa (OGC), and myself. Isabelle Pinzler from the Department of Justice will also be attending.

In general, the purpose of the meeting is to listen to, but inform our visitors of how we intend to proceed with the Justice Department's proposal to reform federal affirmative action procurement. June Gayle in Sylvia's office will setting up a brief meeting on Wednesday morning for us to get together as a group to make sure that we are on the same page. Please let me know if you will be able to attend the Thursday meeting.

thanks for your message. Jim Dorskind wants you to clear my draft letter to Patsy Fleming -- the bad part is that I need it back right away. They are having a good-bye party tomorrow at AIDS Policy and they want to present the letter. Thanks.

Sarah x65514

As you leave the Administration, I want to thank you for your hard work and many contributions to the Office of National AIDS Policy.

During your tenure as Director, the White House Office of National AIDS Policy made remarkable progress in our battle against HIV and AIDS. You oversaw significant increases in funding for AIDS research, prevention, treatment, and housing that helped to bring life-sustaining care to thousands more Americans. You helped focus a new national attention on the critical challenges that HIV presents to young people. The 1995 report on this topic has changed the national dialogue and empowered young people to protect themselves. This period also saw the development of the first-ever National AIDS Strategy, which established goals for our nation and opportunities for progress in the year ahead.

On behalf of all Americans, thank you for working so hard to end the suffering caused by this terrible disease. Hillary joins me in sending best wishes for every future success and happiness.

TEXT:

As I set up the Federal agency group on the summit, I want to make sure we are on the same wave length on the purpose/process. So here are some questions:

1. I assume you want Cabinet secretaries to designate a person for the first meeting, rather than hold the first meeting with the secretaries themselves. Is that right? And I assume the kick-off is a memo from you to Cabinet secretaries asking them to let me know whom they designate. I will send you a draft for your review if this is right.

2. Do you want to attend the first meeting? I assume you wouldn't attend any meetings beyond the first one.

3. I assume the basic purpose of the group is to figure out what agency commitments are. A baseline question is whether we coordinate our commitment in some way around a single theme, vs. let the agencies go off in their chosen directions. I assume the first is preferable, and the latter is easier. And that Elena and I should talk more about this.

4. Do we invite the Corporation to the meetings? I know it is our process, not theirs, but they know an awful lot that I don't yet in terms of answering all of the agencies' questions. Maybe they are invited as guests as they are needed? Particularly to the first meeting, to give an overview of the summit, and answer the agencies' thousands of questions? (As you can imagine, everyone knows someone who wants to be involved, everyone wants to attend, and there are a lot of energies to channel in that regard.) FYI, they are certainly assuming they will be at these meetings -- not that that is any reason for them to come.

5. Elena and I can probably handle this question, but you might want to be involved. I assume the White House as an organization also needs to make a commitment and be part of the Federal interagency group. The question is who from the White House manages this -- us or someone else. I have already had P6/(b)(6) of the volunteer office vying for this honor (although their efforts really focus on getting volunteers in here to help with the mail, which is not exactly the idea).

Finally, FYI, I am in the process of managing the related question of how to educate all the different parts of the White House about this without losing control of it. Everyone is calling to say they want to be involved or think they should play a central role. Cabinet affairs wants to help run the interagency process; the VP's office is trying to talk independently to the Corporation about how the summit dovetails with their community empowerment conference in April; public liaison has all kinds of ideas. So that is fun to manage.

Did you get my draft no-fault memo? Aside from the fact that I need to add something about what "support" means -- saying we think it's something states should do, "authorizing" states to do it (a meaningless act since they can already), incenting them to do it (e.g., through more highway safety funds), or requiring them to adopt a choice plan -- do you have any suggestions before I go final?

MEMORANDUM FOR ERSKINE BOWLES
FROM: GENE SPERLING
 BRUCE REED
SUBJECT: “Choice” No-Fault Auto Insurance

Both you and the President independently asked us to look into whether the “choice” no-fault auto insurance plan devised by Jeffrey O’Connell and Michael Horowitz, supported by Senator Dole in last year’s election, and now proposed for implementation in New Jersey by Governor Whitman might be something we would think a good idea as a matter of policy. Our preliminary response is that the Administration should not reject the plan out of hand -- it has positive features, including some that go beyond premium reduction, that suggest a closer policy look is appropriate. During the 1970s, the Carter Administration supported national no-fault. There is still staff at Commerce and DOT who were part of that effort and have some expertise in the field. Before deciding to pursue any form of no-fault, we should bring these agencies into the process.

One preliminary question is what “support” for a “choice” no-fault plan might mean. It could be as little as using the bully pulpit to say this is a good idea and states should look into it. Or as much as supporting federal legislation to require states to adopt choice plans. A lesser alternative would be to provide federal incentives, such as increased highway safety or medicare funds, for states that adopt choice plans (presumably ones that meet certain statutory standards). Simply authorizing states to adopt such plans is a legally meaningless act, since they can do so already. These degrees of support implicate issues related to federal preemption of state tort law as well as questions related purely related to no-fault.

What is no-fault?

No-fault auto insurance is essentially first party coverage: if you’re injured in an auto accident, your carrier pays for your injuries¹ and your right to sue the other party (if there is one) is either non-existent (“pure” no-fault) or circumscribed. Almost all no-fault policies get their savings from the fact that only economic damages are covered -- no pain and suffering. No state has pure no fault. Depending on how you count, about 13 states and Puerto Rico have some form of no-fault. In New York and Michigan, which have tough verbal thresholds to get into court, it is reasonably effective in holding down costs and keeping cases out of court (although New York premiums are high for other reasons). In other states, which have weak verbal or dollar thresholds, or a right to choose to litigate after an accident, it has been less effective.

“Choice” no-fault is a system under which drivers would be given the option of choosing either a pure no-fault policy with fairly high policy limits (e.g., $250,000) but no access to court or a more expensive policy which allowed court access but in which the policy-holder’s insurance company would pay, no matter who was at fault -- as is the case with uninsured motorist coverage today. Governor Whitman has proposed a variation of this system. There would be four policies: pure no-fault at the $250,000 level (which would have a premium reduction of 20-25%); pure no-fault with a pain and suffering add-on, but on a first party basis (which would result in a premium reduction of about 8%); no-fault but with access to court with a high verbal threshold (reduction unstated but should be some); and the traditional second-party liability system with unfettered access to court.

Problems and opportunities

The usual rationale for moving to no-fault is that it drives down insurance premiums, and the usual response is that it unfairly keeps injured parties from exercising their constitutional right to access to court. A collateral argument is that first party systems “punish” both good drivers and bad drivers who get into accidents, whereas the current system places the burden on the bad driver. This set of arguments does not tell the whole story.

Flaws in the Argument in Favor

Theoretically, no-fault should reduce automobile insurance premiums. A 1996 study by the Rand Institute for Civil Justice concluded that pure no-fault would reduce personal injury premiums by about 60%, and total premiums -- after taking into account the 50% of the typical premium that is for property coverage -- by about 30%. There are several reasons this has not been borne out in practice in the states that have adopted no-fault, and some additional reasons why certain states are likely to benefit less in any event.

- As noted above, no state has pure no-fault. Where there are weak verbal thresholds or dollar thresholds, not only do cases continue to get to court, but there is pressure to inflate medical expenses to go over the limits.
- While legal costs are a significant part of the premium dollar, other costs are important too in determining how fast premiums go up, such as the rate of increase in medical costs (leaving aside any impact of no-fault on these costs). Moreover, automobile insurance is a competitive business in most states and insurance companies regularly cycle through periods of declining and rising premiums.
- In states with a very high proportion of single-car accidents -- i.e., most rural states -- no-fault does not change the complexion of the payout system, and therefore should not have much effect on premiums, which are usually fairly low in the first place. You can't sue a tree. Rand claims that the proportion of uninsured motorists doesn't matter much, but admits they don't really know.

- Even Rand, generally supportive of no-fault, admits that the most seriously injured individuals will probably get less compensation than under the current system. (The least seriously injured will cease being overcompensated.)

Additional benefits from no-fault

Even if there were no premium reduction, however, no-fault might have other benefits:

- As a medical matter, people who are injured who receive high quality medical and rehabilitative treatment quickly are more likely to recover fully. By keeping cases out of court, no-fault reduces the temptation to keep the plaintiff injured for the jury. Moreover, it provides the money to get the rehabilitation that's needed.
- This was important in the 1970s, but probably has gotten even more important since because:
 - Fewer people have medical insurance today; and
 - Seatbelt and airbags save lives, but those saved are often severely injured.
- High verbal threshold no-fault probably reduces fraud in the medical care system, and should reduce volume pressures on the civil justice system.

Flaws in the Opposition

The part of the argument in opposition that is stated in constitutional terms is basically unanswerable, except to note that in general not everyone has access to the civil justice system because of the cost and time involved in using the system. (The efforts of Republicans to get rid of contingency fees and institute loser pays would, of course, exacerbate this problem, and undoubtedly no-fault's opponents will lump any support on our part with these changes we oppose.) Portions of their argument relating to the lack of reduction in premiums in no-fault states or the fact that many rural states have much lower premiums than no-fault states ignore the different economics of the states and/or the problems related to low thresholds, but clearly need to be taken into account in determining the practical real-life impact of adopting no-fault.

SUBJECT: LEGISLATIVE REPORT

Today, Director Raines testified before the House Budget Committee on the President's FY98 Budget. Secretary Rubin/Jack Lew also testified on the budget, before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The House Judiciary Committee announced that the House will postpone their vote on H.J. Res 1, the Balanced Budget Constitutional Amendment until after the Senate holds their vote. A number of House Republicans are wavering in their support, so GOP leaders hope the amendment will pass in the Senate and increase the chances of its passage in the House.

Also today, the special message on FY 1997 rescissions and deferrals, signed by the President on Monday, was delivered to Congress. The package includes $397 million of rescissions.

Deputy Director John Koskinen will testify tomorrow (Wednesday) at 10:00 am before the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee on GPRA. Also at 10:00 am, Sally Katzen will testify before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee on the ozone/PM10 standard.

Upcoming hearings on the President's Budget:

Wednesday, 2/12 at 10am Secretary Rubin/Jack Lew before the Senate Finance Committee

Thursday, 2/13 at 10am June O'Neill testifies before the House Budget

Thursday, 2/20 at 9:30am Director Raines before the House Government Reform, DC Subcommittee on DC Revitalization Plan

Wednesday, 2/26 Director Raines before the Joint Economic Committee

CONGRESS TODAY (2/11):

SENATE:

The Senate today resumed consideration of the Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution. The Senate tabled Senator Wellstone's amendment (#3), to provide that under-privileged youth not be treated inequitably, by a vote of 64 to 36. Also today, by a vote of 100 to 0, the Senate confirmed the nomination of Bill Richardson as U.S. Representative to the United Nations.

TEXT:

Last night, I faxed you a copy of the proposed OMB passback on the HHS (Golden) testimony on the Administration's welfare and adoption proposals. This testimony will be delivered on Thursday before the House Subcommittee on Human Resources. I have received an additional edit to this testimony:

p. 3, third paragraph, 7 lines down. Currently reads: "We will collect all the information we can on how the states are using their dollars and we will take all the administrative actions in our power to ensure that state policies focus on work and do not result in costs to the Federal government due to the loss of child support collections."

Proposed edit from IM in bold: "We will collect all the information we can on how the states are using their dollars and we will take all the administrative actions in our power to ensure that state policies focus on work, and, if necessary, we will work with the states and Congress to develop legislation to ensure that this flexibility does not result in costs to the Federal government due to the loss of child support collections."

Is this edit OK? Please let me know as soon as possible. Thank you.

Elena -

I just spoke with Jack Gibbons about this morning's meeting and, in doing so, mentioned that you had read a list of combined DPC/NEC issue areas for cabinet agency consideration in advance of the DPC and NEC meetings later this week.

Jack said he would like to see a copy of the list as we move in the direction of a unified list per yesterday's 5pm meeting. I had jotted down the issues that were directly relevant to us (i.e., science and technology), but I did not take down the whole list. Accordingly, I would appreciate it if you would fax, e-mail, or send the whole list my way. My fax number is 66049, my room number is 428.5, or call me at 62735 and I'll send someone over to pick up a copy.

Thanks.

Jon
