TEEN PREGNANCY EVENT

DATE: May 2, 1997
LOCATION: Roosevelt Room
TIME: 2:00 pm - 3:00 pm
FROM: Bruce Reed/Elena Kagan

I. PURPOSE

To demonstrate the Administration's commitment to reducing teen pregnancy and to highlight the one year anniversary of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy and their first 12 honorees. The event also recognizes the month of May as Teen Pregnancy Prevention Month.

II. BACKGROUND

The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy. It formed in response to President Clinton's challenge, issued in his 1995 State of the Union address, that "parents and leaders across the country... join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy." May 1997 marks the campaign's first anniversary.

Following his State of the Union comments, the President held a meeting at the White House with a group of prominent teen pregnancy prevention experts and advocates to discuss what could be done to combat the problem. From that meeting came a private sector planning effort that led to the creation of the national campaign.

The campaign is chaired by former New Jersey Governor Thomas H. Kean. Its Board of Directors includes Whoopi Goldberg, Katherine Graham, the Hon. Nancy Kassebaum-Baker, the Hon. Warren B. Rudman, and William Galston. Isabel V. Sawhill, President of the campaign, was an Associate Director of the Office of Management and Budget during President Clinton's first term.

Today, at an earlier event on Capitol Hill, the campaign distributed three reports. The first, Whatever Happened to Childhood chronicles the problem of teen pregnancy in the United States. Using mostly previously released data, the report finds that: 1) although we are making some progress, there is much more work to do and, 2) despite consistent community-based efforts, the evidence has not born out a simple solution to the problem so we must continue to be creative, innovative and persistent in our efforts. A second report, Snapshots from the Front Line, provides examples of ways that communities are working to prevent teen pregnancy, highlighting some of today's honorees. The campaign is also distributing a previously released report No Easy Answers: Research Findings on Programs to Reduce Teen Pregnancy, which concludes that there are no single or simple approaches known to markedly reduce adolescent pregnancy, but that nearly all sex education program produce some socially desirable outcomes (such as an increase in knowledge) and that programs that focus on sexuality do not increase sexual activity.

At the close of the program you will recognize 12 honorees chosen by the Campaign who will be seated in the front row. Each represents prevention approaches that are lowering teen pregnancy rates and strengthening communities. The honorees' work embodies several key themes that are essential to preventing teen pregnancy:

- Emphasizing values and self-esteem in working with adolescents;
- Forging partnerships with the corporate sector;
- Focusing the community on a "unity of goal" to prevent teen pregnancy even when there are conflicts over program approaches;
- Encouraging adult-child communication;
- Involving youth in the discussion;
- Emphasizing the importance of male involvement in prevention;
- Recognizing the importance of program evaluation; and
- Involving the media in reducing teen pregnancy.

In your remarks, you will discuss two new teen pregnancy prevention grant programs and new findings from a study of childbearing and family planning released yesterday by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Grants: In Los Angeles yesterday (May 1), Secretary Shalala announced the two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. One program will be aimed at teenage girls and the other at teenage boys. Both grow out of HHS' new Girl Power! Campaign which is aimed at enhancing self-esteem, promoting good health, and preventing unhealthy behaviors among girls 9 to 14 years old. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.

HHS Study: The Secretary also discussed a newly released study which shows that teen sexual activity declined from 55 to 50 percent during the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 10 percent -- but significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over. This data is part of a new study of child bearing and family planning covering all women 15-44.

III. PARTICIPANTS

The First Lady
Former New Jersey Governor Thomas H. Kean, Chair of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy.

The candidate for Surgeon General has a rather extensive list of publications to his credit. In the absence of any special expertise in our group on a candidate's particular academic specialty, I am trying to enlist the aid of others in the complex to review publications. Is there someone in your office who could review a list of publications, do triage, and help us review them?

TEXT:

I got a call earlier today from Ben Freeland in Leg Affairs asking whether the Leahy changes in the volunteer bill -- which then went on to pass by 99-1 -- "satisfied the Administration's concerns." As I understand it, Ben is writing this for something to go to a Senate caucus this weekend, so it's important we get the right answer. Unfortunately (for all of you) I will be out of the office and unreachable until late in the day tomorrow. Ben needs an answer before then. Someone needs to call him on 66650.

I've left copies of the bill on your desks. Essentially, all Leahy was able to do -- under, I gather, pressure from the majority to claim Democrats were hypocrites because they wouldn't support volunteerism -- was limit the bill to volunteers only, eliminating the limitations on liability of nonprofits and government entities.

In my opinion, the resulting bill would, standing alone, be acceptable in the context of the push for volunteerism, although there still is the broader issue whether anyone has demonstrated a need to preempt. Admittedly, someone volunteering with the Klan who negligently hits someone else while driving a car to get the food for a Klan picnic would probably get the benefit of the bill (since I assume the picnic wouldn't be a hate crime) but I assume we could live with that eventuality.

The real problem, of course, is that this bill does not stand alone, out of the context of broad tort reform. THEREFORE, the fact that the bill still contains: (i) one-way preemption; (ii) a total bar of joint and several liability for non-economic damages; and (iii) a punitives standard that might be tougher than we want, in addition to the overly broad definition of non-profit organization, does raise some concern. The Porter bill pending in the House with bi-partisan support is, of course, not really a preemption bill at all, but an incentive. Even looked at as a preemption, it has NONE of the problems of the revised Coverdale bill.

I therefore think our message to the Democratic Senators should be: we think Senator Leahy's initial speech was right on point but understand why you went along with this, and it's certainly better than the original Coverdale bill. However, the basic question of why preemption hasn't been answered, and moreover there are still some real problems with the bill, in the context of the Republicans' broader push for tort reform, namely one-way preemption, the total bar on joint and several liability for non-economic damages and [? an excessively high punitives standard?]. Moreover, the extremely broad definition of nonprofit organization remains troubling. We think the right thing to do is for every Democrat, and the Administration, to get behind the Porter bill, and to work hard to get that bill, which has none of these problems, through the House and, eventually, the bill that is adopted by the conference committee. Failing that, we think it essential that at least the joint and several liability provision be removed.

TEEN PREGNANCY EVENT

DATE: May 2, 1997
LOCATION: Roosevelt Room
TIME: 2:00 pm - 3:00 pm
FROM: Bruce Reed

I. PURPOSE

To demonstrate the Administration's commitment to reducing teen pregnancy and to highlight the one year anniversary of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy and their first 12 honorees. The event also recognizes the month of May as Teen Pregnancy Prevention Month.

II. BACKGROUND

The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy. It formed in response to President Clinton's challenge, issued in his 1995 State of the Union address, that "parents and leaders across the country... join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy." May 1997 marks the campaign's first anniversary.

Following his State of the Union comments, the President held a meeting at the White House with a group of prominent teen pregnancy prevention experts and advocates to discuss what could be done to combat the problem. From that meeting came a private sector planning effort that led to the creation of the national campaign.

The campaign is chaired by former New Jersey Governor Thomas H. Kean. Its Board of Directors includes Whoopi Goldberg, Katherine Graham, the Hon. Nancy Kassebaum-Baker, the Hon. Warren B. Rudman, and William Galston. Isabel V. Sawhill, President of the campaign, was an Associate Director of the Office of Management and Budget during President Clinton's first term.

Today, at an earlier event on Capitol Hill, the campaign distributed three reports. The first, Whatever Happened to Childhood, chronicles the problem of teen pregnancy in the United States. Using mostly previously released data, the report finds that: 1) although we are making some progress, there is much more work to do and 2) there is no single or simple solution to the problem so we must continue to be creative, innovative, and persistent in our efforts. A second report, Snapshots from the Front Line, provides examples of community efforts to prevent teen pregnancy, highlighting some of today's honorees. The campaign is also distributing a previously released report No Easy Answers: Research Findings on Programs to Reduce Teen Pregnancy, which finds that only a few programs have produced credible evidence that they reduce the risk of pregnancy, but the overwhelming evidence shows that sex education does not increase sexual activity.

At the close of the program you will recognize 12 honorees chosen by the campaign who will be seated in the front row. Each honoree supports prevention approaches that are helping to lower teen pregnancy rates and strengthen communities. The honorees' work embodies several key themes that are essential to preventing teen pregnancy:

- Emphasizing values and self-esteem in working with adolescents;
- Forging partnerships with the corporate sector;
- Focusing the community on a "unity of goal" to prevent teen pregnancy even when there are conflicts over program approaches;
- Encouraging adult-child communication;
- Involving youth in the discussion;
- Emphasizing the importance of male involvement in prevention;
- Recognizing the importance of program evaluation; and
- Involving the media in reducing teen pregnancy.

In your remarks, you will discuss two new teen pregnancy prevention grant programs and new findings from a study of childbearing and family planning released yesterday by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Grants: In Los Angeles yesterday (May 1), Secretary Shalala announced the two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. One program will be aimed at teenage girls and the other at teenage boys. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.

HHS Study: The Secretary also discussed a newly released study which shows that teen sexual activity declined from 55 to 50 percent during the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 10 percent -- but significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over. This data is part of a new study of child bearing and family planning covering all women 15-44.

VI. REMARKS

Prepared by Jennifer Klein.

BACKGROUND AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS FACT SHEET

Over the past four years, the Clinton Administration has launched a comprehensive effort to prevent teen pregnancy. Data shows we are making progress:

- Teen birth rates have fallen four years in a row, by 8 percent from 1991 to 1995, and appear to have continued to drop since then; and
- A new study, released today by HHS, shows the percentage of teenagers who have had sex declined by 10 percent in the 1990s (from 55 percent in 1990 to 50 percent in 1995).

However, there is still much work to do. More than 4 out of 10 young women become pregnant before age 20 and 75 percent of those who give birth do so outside of marriage. Teen pregnancy remains a major social problem for this country and one that none of us can ignore.

Administration Accomplishments

- Since 1993, the Administration has supported innovative and promising teen pregnancy prevention strategies tailored to the unique needs of communities. HHS-supported programs already reach about 30 percent or 1,410 communities in the United States.
- In his 1995 State of the Union address, President Clinton challenged “parents and leaders across the country ... to join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy to make a difference.” In response to his challenge, The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy was formed. The national campaign is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy by supporting values and fostering actions that are consistent with a pregnancy-free adolescence. This month marks the national campaign’s first anniversary.
- The President has consistently supported efforts to reduce teen pregnancy as part of welfare reform, and the law he signed in August 1996 contains several important provisions:
 - Unmarried minor parents are required to stay in school and live at home, or in an adult-supervised setting, in order to receive assistance;
 - The law encourages “second chance homes” -- adult-supervised residential homes designed to provide teen parents with the skills and support they need;
 - $50 million a year in new funding for state abstinence education activities is provided starting FY 1998;
 - The law includes the toughest ever child support enforcement measurements which send a strong message to young boys and girls that they should not have children until they are ready to provide for them.

- Just yesterday, Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala announced two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. One program will be aimed at teenage girls and the other at teenage boys. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.
- The Secretary also released a new study that shows that teen sexual activity declined from 55 to 50 percent in the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 10 percent -- but is significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over. This data is part of a new study of child bearing and family planning covering all women 15-44.

Announcement

To mark the first anniversary of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy, the First Lady will today recognize 12 individuals chosen by the campaign for their efforts to prevent teen pregnancy. The First Lady will also discuss two new teen pregnancy prevention grant programs, as well as findings from a new study of childbearing and family planning released yesterday by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Background

The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy. It formed in response to President Clinton's challenge, issued in his 1995 State of the Union address, that "parents and leaders across the country... join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy." May 1997 marks the campaign's first anniversary.

Following his State of the Union comments, the President held a meeting at the White House with a group of prominent teen pregnancy prevention experts and advocates to discuss what could be done to combat the problem. From that meeting came a private sector planning effort that led to the creation of the national campaign.

The campaign is chaired by former New Jersey Governor Thomas H. Kean. Its Board of Directors includes Whoopi Goldberg, Katherine Graham, the Hon. Nancy Kassebaum-Baker, the Hon. Warren B. Rudman, and William Galston. Isabel V. Sawhill, President of the campaign, was an Associate Director of the Office of Management and Budget during President Clinton's first term.

To commemorate the first anniversary of the campaign, the First Lady is recognizing 12 honorees chosen by the campaign for their outstanding leadership. Each honoree has promoted prevention approaches that are helping to lower teen pregnancy rates and strengthening communities. The honorees' work embodies several key themes that are essential to preventing teen pregnancy:

- Emphasizing values and self-esteem in working with adolescents;
- Forging partnerships with the corporate sector;
- Focusing the community on a "unity of goal" to prevent teen pregnancy even when there are conflicts over program approaches;
- Encouraging adult-child communication;
- Involving youth in the discussion;
- Emphasizing the importance of male involvement in prevention;
- Recognizing the importance of program evaluation; and
- Involving the media in reducing teen pregnancy.

Secretary Shalala's Announcements

In Los Angeles yesterday (May 1), Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala announced two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.

The Secretary also discussed a newly released study which shows that teen sexual activity declined from 55 to 50 percent during the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 10 percent -- but significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over. This data is part of a new study of child bearing and family planning covering all women 15-44.

Q&A MAY 2 TEEN PREGNANCY EVENT

Question: Why did you choose to honor these specific programs picked by the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy?

Answer: Each of these people has offered tremendous leadership in the fight against teen pregnancy. The honorees' work embodies several key themes that are essential to preventing teen pregnancy: emphasizing values and self-esteem in working with adolescents; forging partnerships with the corporate sector; encouraging adult-child communication; involving youth in the discussion; emphasizing the importance of male involvement in prevention; and involving the media.

Question: What was it that Secretary Shalala announced yesterday in California?

Answer: Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala announced two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. One program will be aimed at teenage girls and the other at teenage boys. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.

The Secretary also released a new study that shows that teen sexual activity declined from 55 to 50 percent in the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 10 percent -- but is significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over.

Question: How much has the teen birth rate fallen over the past several years?

Answer: HHS last October released data showing an 8 percent drop in teen birth rates from 1991 to 1995, and the latest data indicates that the decline has continued.

Question: Why do you cite teen birth rates but not teen pregnancy rates? Have teen pregnancy rates fallen too?

Answer: Teen pregnancy rates refer to the rate at which teens become pregnant while teen birth rates measure the rate at which teens actually give birth. Teen pregnancy rates and teen birth rates have both fallen over the last few years. Teen pregnancy rates fell slightly from a high of 117 pregnancies per 1,000 women in 1990 to 112 per 1,000 women in 1992 (the most recent year for which data is available). The reason we cite teen birth rates more often than teen pregnancy rates is that teen birth rates are more current.

Question: What causes the difference between the teen pregnancy rate and the teen birth rate?

Answer: More than half of teen pregnancies result in birth, one third end in abortion and another 14 percent end in miscarriage.

Question: In other words, are you saying that teen pregnancy increases the incidence of abortion?

Answer: Since 1990, abortion rates among teens have declined because fewer teens are becoming pregnant, and, in recent years, fewer pregnant teens have chosen to have an abortion. Today, one-third of teens end their pregnancies in abortion, and teens account for roughly one-quarter of all abortions performed annually. There is no stronger argument for teen pregnancy prevention and family planning than the need to reduce the number of abortions in this country.

Question: Isn't abstinence alone the best way to prevent abortion? Don't family planning and sex education increase abortion?

Answer: We believe unmarried teenagers should abstain from having sex. However, it is unrealistic, even dangerous, to ignore the fact that some teens will, in fact, have sex outside of marriage and before they are ready for it. It is for that reason, that we must simultaneously preach abstinence and teach teens about family planning and sex, including the use of birth control. By offering teens family planning and sex education, we are working to prevent abortion.

Question: Is teen pregnancy primarily a problem in African-American neighborhoods?

Answer: No. Teen pregnancy is a problem everywhere, across racial and socio-economic lines. About half of all pregnant teens aged 15-19 are white. However, teen birth rates are higher among African-American and Hispanic teens than among white teens.

Question: What are the negative effects on a teen mother and her child?

Answer: Early parenting limits a young mother's likelihood of completing high school -- less than one-third of teens who begin their families before age 18 ever complete high school -- and increases the likelihood that young mothers will end up in poverty. In addition, the children of teen mothers have more health problems, do much worse in school, live in home environments of lower quality, suffer higher rates of abuse and neglect, and are more likely to become teen mothers themselves.

Question: What else has the Clinton Administration done to prevent teen pregnancy?

Answer: We have done a lot.

Since 1993, the Administration has supported innovative and promising teen pregnancy prevention strategies tailored to the unique needs of communities. HHS-supported programs already reach about 30 percent or 1,410 communities in the United States.

In his 1995 State of the Union address, President Clinton challenged "parents and leaders across the country ... to join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy to make a difference." In response to his challenge, The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy was formed. The national campaign is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy. This month marks the national campaign's first anniversary.

The President has consistently supported efforts to reduce teen pregnancy as part of welfare reform, and the law he signed in August 1996 contains several important provisions:

- Unmarried minor parents are required to stay in school and live at home, or in an adult-supervised settings in order to receive assistance;
- "Second Chance Homes" -- adult-supervised residential homes designed to provide teen parents with the skills and support they need to finish school, become good role models, and providers for their children -- are allowed and encouraged;
- $50 million a year in new funding for state abstinence education activities is provided starting FY 1998;
- The new law includes tough child support enforcement which sends the strongest possible message to young boys and girls that they should not have children until they are ready to provide for them.

Question: Last year the President appointed Dr. Henry Foster as his senior advisor on teen pregnancy prevention and youth issues. What has Dr. Foster accomplished to date?

Answer: Dr. Foster is a key part of the Administration's effort to send a message to teenagers of the importance of postponing child bearing until they are emotionally, physically, and financially prepared for the responsibility. Dr. Foster has spent the last year-plus traveling around the country visiting with teenagers and community-based prevention programs.

Planned Parenthood is the world's oldest and largest voluntary family planning organization which provides educational programs to enhance the understanding of individual and societal implications of human sexuality. Sheila Johnson, Executive Vice President of Corporate Affairs, Black Entertainment Television (BET)

Teen Summit is BET's award-winning, weekly talk show that focuses on African-American teens and engages teens and celebrities in frank discussions about issues affecting young people. In May 1997, as part of their Teen Summit programming, BET will air a live Town Meeting focusing on the consequences of teen pregnancy and on involving boys and men in preventing teen pregnancy. BET has also created teen pregnancy PSAs which will be broadcasted around the time of the Town Meeting and shared with other networks who wish to promote the issue.

Ann S. Moore, President of People Magazine, New York, New York

In the fall of 1994, Ms. Moore ran a cover article for People on teen pregnancy entitled, "Babies Who Have Babies: A Day in the Life of Teen Pregnancy in America." This issue was one of the highest selling issues in People Magazine history. The article focused on the stress teen pregnancy puts on teen mothers and all involved. The article and its sequel a year later raised the profile of the consequences of teen pregnancy.

THE WHITE HOUSE AT WORK
Thursday, May 1, 1997

YESTERDAY: NEW ECONOMIC NUMBERS SHOW ECONOMY GROWING STEADY AND STRONG UNDER PRESIDENT CLINTON

Yesterday, new GDP numbers showed that President Clinton's economic strategy is working:

- Growth for the first quarter was 5.6 --the highest in a decade. Inflation remains low, exports rose by 8.1 , and investment in business equipment rose by 12.9 percent --making business investment under President Clinton stronger than under any President since JFK.
- More than four years ago, President Clinton inherited rising deficits, unemployment at 7.5 percent, and widening income inequality. Today, because of President Clinton's 63 cut in the deficit and the hard work of the American people, we have 11.9 million new jobs, unemployment at 5.2 --the lowest in 7 years --and low inflation and interest rates to keep the economy growing.
- President Clinton said yesterday: "It is imperative that we pass a bipartisan balanced budget agreement to continue this solid economic progress...our economic policies and this year's healthy growth may help us cut the deficit for the fifth straight year --for the first time in 50 years. Now it's time to finish the job and balance the budget."

TOMORROW: PRESIDENT CLINTON DEDICATES NEW FDR MEMORIAL

President Clinton will dedicate the first Presidential memorial since FDR dedicated the Jefferson memorial in 1943. President Clinton will honor FDR's achievements, and challenge America to summon the same sense of confidence, hope, and purpose to meet today's challenges:

- FDR opened the doors of opportunity for all: sparking the growth of the great American middle class and creating the G.I. bill, the Social Security and unemployment systems, mortgage and bank insurance, the minimum wage and fair labor standards.
- FDR made America the world's indispensable nation: leading the crusade to free the world from tyranny, turning America into a world power and paving the way for the global economy.
- FDR believed in the American community, writing in the speech he was working on when he died: “If civilization is to survive, we must cultivate the science of human relationships -- the ability of all peoples, of all kinds, to live together and work together, in the same world, at peace.”

- FDR believed in our national government meeting major national challenges:
“The country needs...bold, persistent experimentation. It is common sense to take a method and try it; if it fails, admit it frankly and try another. But above all, try something.”
- As we face an age of promise and possibility as great as FDR’s, President Clinton will reaffirm FDR’s legacy. As he said at the Library of Congress last night: “Together we will renew our commitment to fight tyranny with liberty, ignorance with knowledge, fear with hope and confidence.”

Announcement

May marks both teen pregnancy prevention month and the first anniversary of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy. Today, in recognition of both these events, The First Lady recognizes the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy's first 12 honorees -- individuals from around the country whose efforts to prevent teen pregnancy are making a difference. The First Lady also discusses two new teen pregnancy prevention grant programs and findings from a new study of childbearing and family planning to be released later this month by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Background

The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy. It formed in response to President Clinton's challenge issued in his 1995 State of the Union address that "parents and leaders across the country... join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy..." May 1997 marks the campaign's first anniversary.

Following his State of the Union comments, the President held a meeting at the White House with a group of prominent teen pregnancy prevention experts and advocates to discuss what might be done to combat the problem. From that meeting came a private sector planning effort that led to the creation of the national campaign.

The campaign is chaired by former New Jersey Governor Thomas H. Kean. Its Board of Directors includes Whoopi Goldberg, Katherine Graham, the Hon. Nancy Kassebaum-Baker, the Hon. Warren B. Rudman, and William A. Galston. Isabel V. Sawhill, President of the Campaign, was an Associate Director of the Office of Management and Budget during President Clinton's first term.

To commemorate the anniversary of the national campaign, the First Lady is recognizing 12 honorees chosen by the Campaign for their outstanding leadership. Each represents prevention approaches that are lowering teen pregnancy rates and strengthening communities.

The honorees' work embodies several key themes that are essential to preventing teen pregnancy:

- Emphasizing values and self-esteem in working with adolescents;
- Forging partnerships with the corporate sector;
- Focusing the community on a "unity of goal" to prevent teen pregnancy even when there are conflicts over program approaches;
- Encouraging adult-child communication;
- Involving youth in the discussion;
- Emphasizing the importance of male involvement in prevention;
- Recognizing the importance of program evaluation; and
- Involving the media in reducing teen pregnancy.

Secretary Shalala's Announcements

In Los Angeles yesterday (May 1), Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala announced two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. One program will be aimed at teenage girls and the other at teenage boys. Both grow out of HHS' new Girl Power! Campaign which is aimed at enhancing self-esteem, promoting good health, and preventing unhealthy behaviors among girls 9 to 14 years old. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.

The Secretary also discussed a new study, to be released later this month by HHS, which shows the percentage of teenagers who have had sex declined in the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 5 percentage points -- but is significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over. This data is part of a new study of child bearing and family planning covering all women 15-44.

BACKGROUND AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS FACT SHEET

Over the past four years, the Clinton Administration has launched a comprehensive effort to prevent teen pregnancy. Data shows we are making progress:

- Teen birth rates have fallen four years in a row, by 10 percent since 1991 (from 62.1 births per 1,000 women aged 15-19 in 1991 to 55.6 births in June 1996); and
- A new study, to be released later this month by HHS, shows the percentage of teenagers who have had sex declined in the 1990s (from 55 percent in 1990 to 50 percent in 1995).

However, there is still much work to do. More than 4 out of 10 young women become pregnant before age 20 -- nearly a million a year -- and 75 percent of those who give birth do so outside of marriage. Teen pregnancy remains a major social problem for this country and one that none of us can ignore. Yesterday, Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala announced two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. Today, in honor of teen pregnancy prevention month and the first anniversary of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy, the First Lady will recognize 12 individuals from around the country whose efforts to prevent teen pregnancy are making a difference.

Administration Accomplishments

- Since 1993, the Administration has supported innovative and promising teen pregnancy prevention strategies tailored to the unique needs of communities. HHS-supported programs already reach about 30 percent or 1,410 communities in the United States.
- In his 1995 State of the Union address, President Clinton challenged "parents and leaders across the country ... to join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy to make a difference." In response to his challenge, The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy was formed. The national campaign is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy by supporting values and fostering actions that are consistent with a pregnancy-free adolescence. This month marks the national campaign's first anniversary.
- The President has consistently supported efforts to reduce teen pregnancy as part of welfare reform, and the law he signed in August 1996 contains several important provisions:
 - Unmarried minor parents are required to stay in school and live at home, or in an adult-supervised setting in order to receive assistance;
 - It encourages "second chance homes" -- adult supervised residential homes designed to provide teen parents with the skills and supports they need;
 - $50 million a year in new funding for state abstinence education activities is provided starting FY 1998;
 - The law includes the toughest ever child support enforcement measurements that send a strong message to young boys and girls that they should not have children until they are ready to provide for them.

- HHS last October released data showing an 8 percent drop in teen birth rates from 1991 to 1995, and the latest data available though June 1996 indicates that the decline has continued. The birth rate for teenagers as of June 1996 stood at 55.6 births per 1,000 women aged 15-19 years, compared to 62.1 in 1991, a decline of 10 percent since 1991.
- Just yesterday, Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala announced two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. One program will be aimed at teenage girls and the other at teenage boys. Both grants grow out of HHS's new Girl Power! Campaign which is aimed at enhancing self-esteem, promoting good health, and preventing unhealthy behaviors among girls 9 to 14 years old. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.
- The Secretary also discussed a new study, to be released later this month by HHS, that shows the percentage of teenagers who have had sex declined in the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 5 percent -- but is significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over. This data is part of a new study of child bearing and family planning covering all women 15-44.

The Challenge

- As much as we have done and as much progress as we have seen, there is much more work to do.
- Every year in this country, over one million teenagers become pregnant and four in 10 girls become pregnant as least once before turning 20.
- The encouraging recent decline in the U.S. teen birth rate is counterbalanced by a negative trend: today, nearly three-quarters of teen births are to unmarried teens, up from 15 percent 30 years ago. Today, teen mothers make up the largest group (48 percent) of all first births to unmarried women.
- Early parenting limits a young mother's likelihood of completing high school -- less than one-third of teens who begin their families before age 18 ever complete high school -- and increases the likelihood that that young mother will end up in poverty.
- When compared to children of older mothers, children of teen mothers have more health problems, do much worse in school, live in home environments of lower quality, suffer higher rates of abuse and neglect, and are more likely to become teen mothers themselves.

Q&A MAY 2 TEEN PREGNANCY EVENT

Question: Why did you choose to honor these specific programs picked by the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy?

Answer: Each of these people has offered tremendous leadership in the fight against teen pregnancy. The honorees' work embodies several key themes that are essential to preventing teen pregnancy: emphasizing values and self-esteem in working with adolescents; forging partnerships with the corporate sector; encouraging adult-child communication; involving youth in the discussion; emphasizing the importance of male involvement in prevention; and involving the media.

Question: What was it that Secretary Shalala announced yesterday in California?

Answer: Just yesterday, Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala announced two new community grant programs to prevent teen pregnancy and promote responsible behavior. One program will be aimed at teenage girls and the other at teenage boys. Both grants grow out of HHS's new Girl Power! Campaign which is aimed at enhancing self-esteem, promoting good health, and preventing unhealthy behaviors among girls 9 to 14 years old. Each of the grant programs will total about $1 million per year and involve public-private partnerships organized by individual communities.

The Secretary also discussed a new study, to be released later this month by HHS, that shows the percentage of teenagers who have had sex declined in the 1990s after increasing steadily for more than two decades. The decline is small -- 5 percentage points -- but is significant because it shows that the long-term increase in teenage sexual activity may finally be over. This data is part of a new study of child bearing and family planning covering all women 15-44 which should be available in about a month.

Question: How much has the teen birth rate fallen over the past several years?

Answer: HHS last October released data showing an 8 percent drop in teen birth rates from 1991 to 1995, and the latest data available though June 1996 indicates that the decline has continued. The birth rate for teenagers as of June 1996 stood at 55.6 births per 1,000 women aged 15-19 years, compared to 62.1 in 1991, a decline of 10 percent since 1991.

DRAFT 5/1/97 10:30

Question: Why do you cite teen birth rates but not teen pregnancy rates? Have teen pregnancy rates fallen too?

Answer: Teen pregnancy rates refer to the rate at which teen become pregnant while teen birth rates measure the rate at which teens actually give birth. Teen pregnancy rates and teen birth rates have both fallen over the last few years. Teen pregnancy rates fell slightly from a high of 117 pregnancies per 1,000 women in 1990 to 112 per 1,000 women in 1992 (the most recent year for which data is available). The reason we more often cite teen birth rates rather than teen pregnancy rates is that teen birth rates are more current.

Question: What causes the difference between the teen pregnancy rate and the teen birth rate?

Answer: More than half of teen pregnancies result in birth, one third end in abortion and another 14 percent end in miscarriage.

Question: In other words, are you saying that teen pregnancy increases the incidence of abortion?

Answer: Since 1990, abortion rates among teens have declined because fewer teens are becoming pregnant, and, in recent years, fewer pregnant teens have chosen to have an abortion. Today, one-third of teens end their pregnancies in abortion, and teens account for roughly one-quarter of all abortions performed annually. I believe there is no stronger argument for teen pregnancy prevention and family planning than the need to reduce the number of abortions in this country.

Question: Isn't abstinence alone the best way to prevent abortion? Don't family planning and sex education increase abortion?

Answer: We believe unmarried teenagers should abstain from having sex. However, it is unrealistic, even dangerous, to ignore the fact that some teens will, in fact, have sex outside of marriage and before they are ready for it. It is for that reason, that we must simultaneously preach abstinence and teach teen about family planning and sex including the use of birth control. By offering teens family planning and sex education, we are working to prevent abortion.

Question: Isn't teen pregnancy primarily a problem in African-American neighborhoods?

Answer: No. Teen pregnancy is a problem every, across racial and socio-economic lines. About half of all pregnant teens aged 15-19 are white. However, teen birth rates are higher among African-American and Hispanic teens than among white teens.

Question: What are the negative effects on a teen mother and her child?

Answer: Early parenting limits a young mother's likelihood of completing high school -- less than one-third of teens who begin their families before age 18 ever complete high school -- and increases the likelihood that young mother will end up in poverty, as well as causing other hardships. In addition, the children of teen mothers have more health problems, do much worse in school, live in home environments of lower quality, suffer higher rates of abuse and neglect, and are more likely to become teen mothers themselves.

Question: What else has the Clinton Administration done to prevent teen pregnancy?

Answer: We have done a lot.

Since 1993, the Administration has supported innovative and promising teen pregnancy prevention strategies tailored to the unique needs of communities. HHS-supported programs already reach about 30 percent or 1,410 communities in the United States.

In his 1995 State of the Union address, President Clinton challenged "parents and leaders across the country ... to join together in a national campaign against teen pregnancy to make a difference." In response to his challenge, The National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy was formed. The National Campaign is a private nonprofit organization dedicated to preventing teen pregnancy. This month marks the National Campaign's first anniversary.

The President has consistently supported efforts to reduce teen pregnancy as part of welfare reform, and the law he signed in August 1996 contains several important provisions:

- Unmarried minor parents are required to stay in school and live at home, or in an adult-supervised setting in order to receive assistance;
- "Second Chance Homes" -- adult supervised residential homes designed to provide teen parents with the skills and supports they need to finish school, become good role models, and providers for their children -- are allowed and encouraged;
- $50 million a year in new funding for state abstinence education activities is provided starting FY 1998;
- The new law includes tough child support measurements that send the strongest possible message to young boys and girls that they should not have children until they are ready to provide for them.

Question: Last year the President appointed Dr. Henry Foster as his senior advisor on teen pregnancy prevention and youth issues. What has Dr. Foster accomplished to date?

Answer: Dr. Foster is a key part of the Administration's effort to send a message to teenagers of the importance of postponing child bearing until they are emotionally, physically, and financially prepared for the responsibility. Dr. Foster has spent the last year-plus traveling around the country visiting with teenagers and community-based prevention programs.

Summary

Whatever Happened to Childhood?

Published by the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy

On May 2nd, the National Campaign To Prevent Teen Pregnancy will release its report, "Whatever Happened to Childhood?"

The report aptly illustrates teen pregnancy as a social crisis that continues to break down family, community and common culture. The message the report sends is twofold: 1) although we are making some progress, there is much more work to do and we must not let our attention stray from this critical national issue and, 2) despite consistent community-based efforts, the evidence has not born out a simple solution to the problem so we must continue to be creative, innovative and persistent in our efforts.

Of the many community experiments around the country, the report states, most have exhibited mixed outcomes, and no one program stands out as having produced clear, replicable results. Community approaches include sex education aimed at delaying sexual activity and reducing the number of sexual partners and using birth control; abstinence only programs; support for community-based family planning services; comprehensive approaches stresses components from each approach and; programs dedicated to nurturing and guiding young people.

In addition to these conclusions, the report also presents some interesting observations that may have future policy implications.

First, the vast majority (85 percent) of pregnancies among teens are not fully planned or unintended. Rather they result from teens' ambivalence about pregnancy, accidents, their confusion about preventing pregnancy, and sometimes their failure to make any clear decision about sexual activity.

Second, many communities do not address the problem at all because the conflict over which approach to use can become so intense that a community decides to do nothing at all. Therefore, the report states, a new and emerging approach to teen pregnancy prevention is community conflict resolution. The report lays out an excellent example of this approach at work. In 1990, the rural community of Tillamook County, Oregon had the highest teen pregnancy rate in the state but fought bitterly over a solution (the Board of Education even voted down several proposals.) Finally, the County decided to embrace a new ethic of "unity of purpose, diversity of means," allowing various segments of the community to develop their own intensive initiatives, from creating a church-based abstinence program to improving access to family planning programs. By 1994, the county teen pregnancy rate had dropped by 70 percent, becoming the lowest in the state. This story is an illustration of a finding supported in research. Dr. Kristen Moore, a member of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy board, has found that pregnancy programs that send mixed messages to teens actually work because the teen will be exposed to all messages and will take what works for her or him, whether it be abstinence, birth control, or self-esteem raising.

Third, although the teen birth rate has decreased in the past few years, the number of births to teens increased in 1993 and 1994, reflecting an overall increase in the U.S. teen population. Because the number of teens is expected to increase further, so will the number of pregnancies and births, perhaps increasing by 26 percent by the year 2010 unless rates are reduced.

The report tells its story using mostly previously released data that remain relevant. Following are facts from the report worth reviewing.

- Every year in this country, over 1 million teenagers become pregnant and four in 10 girls become pregnant as least once before turning 20.
- The pregnancy rate increased among all girls age 15-19 by 23 percent between 1972 and 1990 from 95 to 117 pregnancies per 1,000 women, and then declined to 112 per 1,000 women in 1992 (the year for which the most recent data is available). At the same time, the pregnancy rate among sexually experienced girls decreased 19 percent, largely due to increased use of contraception.
- By 1991, the teen birth rate had reached 62 births per 1,000 women aged 15-19, its highest point in the past two decades. Since then, that rate has fallen slowly to 57 births per 1,000 women in 1995.
- The encouraging recent decline in the U.S. teen birth rate is counterbalanced by a negative trend: today, nearly three-quarters of teen births are to unmarried teens, while as recently as 1960, only 15 percent were. Today, teen mothers make up the largest group (48 percent) of all first births to unmarried women.
- Birth rates are higher among African-American and Hispanic teens than among white teens
- While most pregnant teens are 18 or 19 years old, about 40 percent are 17 or younger and about half of all pregnant teens ages 15-19 are white.
- Many of the fathers of children born to teen mothers are older -- nearly 40 percent of those young men who impregnate a minor teen (under 18) are 20 years old or older.
- More than half of the teen pregnancies result in a birth (1/3 end in abortion and 14 percent in miscarriage) and of those who give birth most keep their child rather than put it up for adoption.
- Early parenting limits a young mother's likelihood of completing high school -- less than one-third of teens who begin their families before age 18 ever complete high school.
- When compared to children of older mothers, children of teen mothers have more health problems, do much worse in school, live in home environments of lower quality, suffer higher rates of abuse and neglect, and are more likely to become teen mothers themselves.
