TEXT:

Bruce, after you talked to Karen, somehow the word got out on the Hill that we support this, rather than we don't oppose it. My best guess is Karen conveyed this to LA County last night, wittingly or unwittingly. (Kay Casstevens talked to Haskins, but she didn't go over the "do not oppose" line.) Dennis Smith is mad, since he brokered the Senate's lesser penalties with Feinstein. He says he now wants to reopen other issues that had been closed and says HHS needs to come up with a way to pay for this.

I am putting together a conference call to clarify, since the difference between these 2 positions may be important. HHS is mad that the word went out without them knowing we were changing positions, and they may be calling around to complain on substance and process. They may still try to argue we should outright oppose this.

BR:

We finally got our hands on a 2-page summary of the Craig-Coverdell drug proposal. I'm sending it over right now. It think it pretty much touches on all of the things that the R's are likely to touch on. No numbers are included, but the transcript I sent over earlier says they estimate it costing about $3 billion. Also, it's not clear that they know where they're going to get the funds from. In the transcript, they say some of this could come out of the existing $16 billion drug budget -- which I don't think is true -- and Chris from Biden's office expressed that they may just tack on authorizations -- which I'm not sure makes sense.

We'll keep trying to dig up the actual language for these proposals and run some numbers on what some of these things may cost. Without speaking to the important issue of where the money comes from to fund these proposals, we should be able to support most of them.

McConnell backs end to tobacco support

Historic split puts Ford plan
in jeopardy

By Gail Gibson
HERALD-LEADER WASHINGTON
BUREAU

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Mitch McConnell said yesterday he will back a plan to end the 60-year-old tobacco price-support program,
creating a historic split between Kentucky
senators over tobacco policy.

Then, in a related move, the Senate's Republican leadership opened last night's debate on sweeping anti-smoking legislation with a last-minute
procedural change putting that plan on equal footing with Sen. Wendell
Ford's competing grower-protection proposal.

Seemingly caught by surprise, an angry Ford complained on the Senate floor that the move was unfair. In effect, it makes it easier for Sen. Richard Lugar to win Senate approval for his grower plan over For d's, which would keep the price-support program in place.

At a midday press conference, McConnell said he still believes in the tobacco program, which has kept prices for raw tobacco high and small farms active for generations.

But McConnell said the program is doomed in Washington,

so growers
tobacco and a devoted should act now to secure an $8-per-pound buyout of their allotments, as proposed by Lugar, an Indiana Republican free-trade proponent.

"I reluctantly see the tobacco program's end. It's not by any means my first choice," said McConnell, R-Louisville. "But it's a recognition on my part of the political reality that is all around us to observe, for even the most casual observer of this issue."

McConnell's decision marks the first time two Kentucky senators, regardless of party affiliation, have split on any key tobacco policy issue.

"I think it's time to get the hound dogs out and see if we can find the senator who's supposed to be representing our tobacco farmers," Ford, D-Owensboro, said yesterday afternoon. It was a reference to McConnell's first Senate race in 1984, when he used hound dogs in a clever ad campaign to contend that incumbent Democrat Walter D. Huddleston was too often missing in action.

Lugar's plan would pay farmers $8 per pound to buy out their right to grow tobacco -- known as a "quota" -- while phasing out the price-support program over three years. It would mean about $18 billion for tobacco farmers and rural communities.

Ford's proposal, known as the LEAF Act, would give farmers a buyout option in as many as 10 payments, but would also keep in place the program's price and production controls. It would bring about $28.5 billion to farmers and rural communities.

McConnell had worked with Ford last summer to craft the LEAF Act, and was a co-sponsor when the bill was introduced last fall. In recent months, however, McConnell has repeatedly raised questions about the price-support program's future in a political environment where tobacco "is the darling of the attack set," as he put it yesterday.

the "It's very, very bad news," said Rod Kuegel, president of the Lexington-based Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association. "I certainly regret this day ever happened, and I hope that McConnell does, too, eventually."

executive director of Danny McKinney, a Rockcastle County farmer who is the burley co-op, stood up in the middle of McConnell's press conference to denounce as "hogwash" any argument that growers care more about a buyout than about preserving the program.

I'm really scared, "I'm really disappointed to hear this announcement today. What am I going and my question to you is, 'What am I going to do now? to raise that will bring my family the benefits that tobacco has brought under the program?' " McKinney asked McConnell. McConnell did not directly respond.

Baesler, both In Kentucky, Gov. Paul Patton and U.S. Rep. Scotty Democrats who support Ford's approach, were critical of McConnell's decision. If the LEAF Act does not pass, Baesler said, "this is McConnell's fault."

But U.S. Rep. Ron Lewis, R-Cecilia, said McConnell is "looking out for the best interest of the family tobacco farmer."

"I have listened to hundreds of tobacco farmers in the past months, and there is growing and consistent support for a buyout," Lewis said.

TEXT:

According to figures released today by the University of California System, based on Statement of Intent to Register responses from admitted students, all UC campuses show slight increases in the percentage of underrepresented minority students (i.e., African American, Hispanic, and American Indian students) who accepted their offers of admission for Fall 1998. In other words, the concern that those minority students admitted to UC institutions would choose not to enroll because they would not feel welcome did not materialize.

However, the actual numbers of underrepresented minorities at the most selective UC campuses (e.g., Berkeley and UCLA) show significant declines from last year.

For example, the 1998 freshman class at Berkeley is predicted to include 14 American Indian students (down from 24 in 1997), 98 African American students (down from 260 in 1997), 185 Chicano students (down from 411 in 1997), and 79 Latino students (down from 81 in 1997). Meanwhile, Berkeley is expecting an increase in the number of Asian American freshman in 1998 to 1,527 (up from 1,478 in 1997) and in white students to 1,131 (up from 1,095 in 1997). In sum, the percentage of underrepresented minorities in the freshman class at Berkeley is expected to fall from 21.4% to 10.4%. I will prepare a more complete analysis shortly. Please let me know if you have any immediate questions.

The Coalition said to tell you that your updates (Bruce and Elena) to the coalition have been very helpful. If you want to do another call in to the group they really appreciate it.

They were thrilled with the event at the White House today.

FORD APPROACH IS BEST FOR PUBLIC HEALTH, PROTECTS FARMERS, AND AVOIDS HANDING A WINDFALL PROFIT TO TOBACCO INDUSTRY

- Lugar Bill Would Require Drastic Cuts in Health Spending

The Lugar bill requires the government to “buy-out” farmers from the quota program over a three-year period (FY1999 through 2002). The cost of this buy-out over the three years is $18 billion dollars. If the Lugar farmer spending is added and state spending is kept the same, the McCain Manager’s Amendment spending on health research and public health programs would have to be cut by 69 percent to make up the difference. (See chart below). In contrast, the Ford-Hollings approach costs $2.1 billion a year during those years and has no effect on the levels of spending in the McCain Amendment for NIH research, cessation, prevention, education and enforcement efforts.

- Ford Limits Amount of Tobacco Grown; Lugar Dramatically Increases U.S. Production

Senator Ford’s bill (LEAF Act) maintains limits on the amount of tobacco that can be grown in the United States. Under the competing Lugar approach, very large producers would quickly expand their production. A U.S. Department of Agriculture analysis concludes production of flue-cured tobacco is likely to increase by as much as 50% and burley tobacco is projected to increase by as much as 20%. That is one reason why the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids, the American Cancer Society, and the American Lung Association support continuation of the tobacco program.

- Ford-Hollings Protects Small and Minority Farms

The increased production with lower profit margins under the Lugar approach will benefit large corporate farmers, however, the legislation would have a disproportionately adverse impact on minority and limited-resource tobacco producers. Market uncertainties and reduced margins on small sales will destabilize many family farming operations. This will have a particularly harsh effect on small African-American farms -- fully 90% of African-American farms have sales of less than $25,000.

- Lugar Leads to a Financial Windfall for Companies

The creation of a free market in tobacco production will dramatically lower the prices the companies will pay to buy tobacco. USDA estimates that under the Lugar bill, the price of flue-cured tobacco would fall from $1.72 a pound to $1.15, and the price of burley would plummet from $1.89 to $1.35. Given that the companies average almost 1.5 billion pounds of purchases a year, USDA estimates a financial windfall by the companies of at least $800 million annually or $20 billion over 25 years. The Ford approach is consistent with the overall tobacco control legislation. It avoids generating windfall profits for the tobacco companies with which the companies will offset the payments designed to force them to reduce youth smoking rates.

The House Judiciary Committee today voted out the Smith bill, including the H-1B reforms that we like. No amendments were offered to weaken the reforms. We sent a letter endorsing the bill and strongly opposing a weakening of the reforms. Peter secured a "Dear Colleague" letter from Gephardt, Bonior and others saying the same.

Lofgren and Pease will offer a training amendment on the floor. This was determined by them to be the fastest way to get the amendment and keep the bill moving (bypassing other committees that might have jurisdiction over the training and application fee components).

The final vote was 23 to 4 (with Bryant, Rogan, Cannon and Rothman voting against).

We do not yet know when the bill will hit the House floor.

Here's what happened, far as I can tell. Cynthia e-mailed me the correct version; I forwarded it to our typing folks; typing somehow printed out the old version and handed it off to me in the hallway; I ran it up to the Oval and missed the mistake; Bruce and Rahm walked it in the Oval; Bruce brought it back down unsigned, saying the President had approved it; we signed it and faxed it to Elena; apparently, Elena caught the problem and told Bruce; he and I sat down and put a correct version together and faxed it off again; we then created new, signed originals and a press stencil and got everything out the door.

Bottom line is - - I take responsibility for the screw up; I'm the guy whose job it is to catch stuff like this and I didn't. Fortunately, DPC prevented what could have been a much more serious error.

I've learned (and am sure you knew this) that Sen. McCain is strongly opposed to the Gorton amendments, but that he didn't have the votes to strike in conference. He is signing on to the Campbell amendment to strike Gorton, and as of now, there are 51 Senators who have no idea how they'll vote on this amendment. Gorton is so complicated and so bad for Indian country, that some signal from us or from Interior will be very important so that our friends know where we stand on this. It is also very important to be able to tell Indian country that we took a stand on this. I feel that the President would want to send this signal--the language in the letter of last night was very mild.

Here an outline of what Susan Page is looking at for her interview with the President tomorrow. Please provide guidance as it pertains to your expertise.

She wants to write the best & newsiest story yet on Tobacco -- we have an opportunity here to deliver great message and advance the story in some way since this will reach over 3.3 million readers across the country. Some of her questions include:

Q: The tobacco bill has encountered problems along the way. Why is that?

Who is to blame?

Do you think the tobacco industry's campaign is working?

Q: The GOP is trying to kill this bill, but what about the voices on the left saying it doesn't go far enough?

On Another Issue:

Q: Will you now reconsider going to China?

Q: If you go, will you raise this with the Chinese gov't?

Q: What do you think about Gingrich's suggestion of a Select Cmt.?

I am getting calls from the counties, cities, about the lack of clarity on the obligation of states to pass through funds to local govts. who have incurred costs in their health expenditures. There is a feeling out there that the Administration is not being clear on this point. I have repeated what Elena told me, but the anxiety level is high at the moment. Can you give me more to say? On the local lawsuit issue, Sen. Feinstein is offering an amendment that would allow the locals who began suits by 1977 to go forward. I hope we will not oppose that. The National League of Cities had written saying they would not support the bill if that provision were not in--I pushed back and they will simply work hard on Feinstein and see what happens.

Dear Senator McCain,

I support your efforts in helping to pass comprehensive tobacco legislation which dramatically reduces youth smoking and to remove Section 604 which requires Indian tribes to collect state taxes on sales of tobacco products.

Since the formation of the Union, the United State has recognized Indian tribes as "domestic dependent nations" that exercise governmental authority over their members and their territory. Where Indians manufacture tobacco products on their own lands, state taxes on reservation-generated tobacco products would normally be pre-empted under the tribal self-determination doctrine; Section 604, as currently drafted, interferes with this fundamental principle. Even with respect to state taxes collected on sales of pre-packaged goods to non-Indians, Section 604 violates traditional principles of comity and federalism, which demand that state-tribal relations be developed based on dialogue and cooperation between states and tribes.

Section 604 establishes a complex scheme to address a problem that many states and Indian tribes have already resolved. At least eighteen states have entered into state-tribal tax agreement with numerous Indian tribes. These agreements ensure that a single tax is imposed, provide a stable tax framework, and ease tax administration significantly. By unilaterally requiring Indian tribes to collect the state taxes and also adding the federal government as an intermediary, Section 604 enormously increases the burden of collecting taxes, without any benefit to the states or the Indian tribes. Federal accounting, oversight, and administrative costs will increase to implement this new legislative scheme.

Agreements are the best mechanisms for mutually satisfactory resolution of tax collection issues between states and tribes. Even if states and tribes are unable to reach agreement, however, states may impose their taxes at the wholesale level to collect taxes on goods that are destined for sale to non-Indians.

As originally drafted, the McCain bill did not disturb the current system, which has worked for both the tribes and the states. It permitted the states and the tribes to work together to collect the state's revenues and to share revenues if they so desire. Moreover, it vindicated the federal government's trust responsibility to Indian tribes and recognized their status as domestic dependent nations.

I hope that you will continue to work to remove Section 604, as currently drafted, from the legislation. Thank you for your important work in this area.

New Statistics on Teen Smoking Provide More Evidence
Why the Senate Should Pass the McCain Tobacco Legislation
May 21, 1998 -- DRAFT 5/20

New statistics released today by the Centers for Disease Control confirm that nicotine hooks American children and creates an addiction that is extremely difficult to break. The data show that 86 percent of teens who smoke daily and try to quit are unsuccessful. Young people also underestimate the addictiveness of nicotine -- 75 percent of daily smokers who expect to quit are still smoking five years later. For many young people, this addiction has very serious implications for their long-term health and threatens their very lives.

Every day, 3000 young people become regular smokers in this country, and 1000 will die prematurely as a result. Today's report provides just one more reason why the Senate needs to pass the McCain legislation this week in order to dramatically reduce youth smoking in this country. Yesterday, the President said he believes the McCain bill a good, strong bill that will make a real dent in teen smoking and he urged Congress should pass it without delay. In particular, he praised the significant improvements made to the new bill, including:

- Tough industry-wide and company-specific lookback surcharges that will finally make reducing youth smoking the tobacco companies' bottom line;
- Protection for all Americans from the health hazards of secondhand smoke;
- No antitrust exemption for the tobacco industry;
- Strong licensing and anti-smuggling provisions to prevent the emergence of contraband markets and to prosecute violators;
- A dedicated fund to provide for a substantial increase in health research funding, a demonstration to test promising new cancer treatments, a nationwide counteradvertising campaign to reduce youth smoking, effective state and local programs in tobacco education, prevention, and cessation, law enforcement efforts to prevent smuggling and crack down on retailers who sell tobacco products to children, assistance for tobacco farmers and their communities, and funds for the states to make additional efforts to promote public health and protect children; and
- The elimination of immunity for parent companies of tobacco manufacturers, an increase in the cap on legal damages to $8 billion per year, and changes to ensure that the cap will be available only to tobacco companies that change the way they do business, by agreeing to accept sweeping restrictions on advertising, continue making annual payments and lookback surcharges even if those provisions are struck down, make substantial progress toward meeting the youth smoking reduction targets, prevent their top management from taking part in any scheme to promote smuggling, and abide by the terms of the legislation rather than challenging it in court.

[5/20 Draft]
Q&A
May 21, 1998

Q. What were the new teen smoking data released today?

A. Today, the Centers for Disease Control released new data on nicotine addiction and cigarette smoking patterns among teenagers. It confirmed that nicotine hooks our kids and creates an addiction that is extremely difficult to break, the same as it does with adults. Specifically, 86 percent of teens who smoke daily and try to quit are unsuccessful. Young people also underestimate the addictiveness of nicotine -- 75 percent of daily smokers who expect to quit are still smoking five years later. Obviously, this addiction may have very serious implications for their long-term health and threaten their very lives. Today's report "Cigarette Smoking Behavior and Nicotine Addiction Among Teens" in the Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report just provides one more reason why the Senate needs to pass the McCain legislation in order to dramatically reduce youth smoking in this country.

Q. How many teens smoke in this country and at what rate?

A. Currently, 36.4 percent of high school students have smoked one or more days in the past month. Of adolescents who have ever tried smoking (70 percent), more than a third go on to become daily smokers during high school.
