As requested, reasons not to cut COPS, in order of most to least defensible:

1. $100 million is for a communications initiative strongly supported by the VP;
2. $76 million funds Brady records, the sex offender registry and DNA lab improvements -- all of which were originally in DOJ budget and cannot be cut;
3. At least $200 million is needed simply to fund the popular earmarks supported by Congress and the Administration (bulletproof vests, school safety, Indian law enforcement, meth enforcement, DC initiative, Police Corps, domestic violence...not to mention a potential "hot spots" earmark for the race initiative;
4. $50 million is needed to fund retention waivers that are strongly supported by the VP;
5. $150 million is for prosecutors initiatives that have already been cut from other parts of the budget (community prosecutors, juvie crime bill);
6. $100 million is for the only sizable prevention increase in the Justice budget; and
7. $600 million is needed if we want to be able to fund a minimum of 10,000 cops per year.

TOTAL: $1.276 Billion

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Bruce Reed
Elena Kagan

SUBJECT: DPC Weekly Report

1. Health Care -- CDC Guidelines for HIV Surveillance: The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) released draft guidance on Thursday to assist states in designing and implementing new HIV surveillance and reporting systems. The guidance recommends that states track people with HIV by name (as states now track people with full-blown AIDS). At our insistence, however, the guidance also allows states to use so-called unique identifier codes, rather than names. The HIV/AIDS community is relieved that the guidance gives states the option of using identifier codes, but is disappointed that it expresses a preference for using names. The community believes that names-based reporting jeopardizes confidentiality and discourages testing; CDC disputes these contentions and argues that name-based reporting generally leads to more effective surveillance. Members of the AIDS Council may raise questions about this issue when they meet with you on December 18. You can respond by indicating strong support for states (like California) that are developing effective alternatives to name-based reporting.

2. Health Care -- Presidential Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities: Your Task Force on the Employment of Adults with Disabilities will present the Vice President with its first report on Tuesday. The Task Force will recommend several new investments (e.g., the Jeffords-Kennedy Work Incentives Improvement Act), which we are considering in the context of the budget process; we are fairly confident that the budget will incorporate enough of these recommendations to elicit a positive response from the disabilities community. In addition, the Task Force will propose a number of administrative actions that we can implement immediately. For example, the Office of Personnel Management will develop a plan to increase the representation of adults with disabilities in the federal workforce, and the Small Business Administration will launch a new outreach campaign to improve opportunities for adults with disabilities. The Vice President, in accepting the report, will reiterate the Administration's commitment to passing a strong and enforceable patients' bill of rights to improve the quality of care for people with disabilities.

3. Health Care -- Dean Ornish: Nancy Ann Min DeParle is meeting with Dr. Ornish today to discuss his proposal for a demonstration project on the cost-effectiveness of programs like his "Life Style Intervention." Nancy Ann will express support for the idea, although she will not be able to formally approve it at this meeting. We will stay on top of this issue in the next few weeks, as HCFA makes decisions about the scope and financing of the demonstration.

4. Health Care -- New FDA Commissioner: The Vice President will swear in Dr. Jane Henney as the new Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration on Tuesday.

5. Education -- ESEA Reauthorization: We are working with the Education Department to include in our ESEA reauthorization proposal a set of accountability requirements that are significantly stronger than any in current law. Some of the proposals under consideration would require states and school districts that receive funding under the ESEA to (1) take immediate steps to identify and intervene in their lowest performing schools; (2) phase out the use of unqualified teachers, including those who are not fully certified or are teaching out of field; (3) phase out the use of instructional aides as primary instructors, especially in high-poverty schools; and (4) have effective policies in place (including appropriate supports for students) to prevent social promotion. We have more to do before we can present you with specific recommendations, but we believe we will be able to get agreement on a plan that demands a serious commitment by states and school districts receiving ESEA funds to set and enforce high standards for schools, teachers, and students.

6. Education -- National Education Goals Panel: The National Education Goals Panel released its annual progress report on Thursday. The report highlighted improvements in school readiness, student achievement in math, and participation of women and minorities in math and science in higher education. The report, however, also pointed to apparent backsliding in teacher quality, student achievement in reading, and student drug use. More generally, the report noted that none of the Goals would be met by 2000. Members of the Panel are now discussing what should happen to the Goals (and the Panel itself) after that year. Most members still see a need for national education goals and a bipartisan, intergovernmental panel to report on progress. Indeed, Senator Bingaman, Governor Hunt, and some members of the business community are urging that you take a high profile role in renewing the call for national goals. We and Secretary Riley are concerned, however, that Governor Engler, Congressman Goodling, and other Republicans would fail to support this effort. We will try to find out more about the likely Republican reaction and then give you a recommendation.

7. Education -- GED Test: You asked at yesterday's budget meeting about the GED test. We have learned that the American Council on Education (ACE) is responsible for developing and administering the GED. The ACE is now in the process of upgrading the test to keep up with rising academic standards, and hopes to unveil a new version of the test in 2001. We will work with the Education Department on possible ways to make use of a strengthened GED in our education proposals.

8. Crime -- Capital Punishment: The Justice Department will release a report on Sunday showing that 17 states executed 74 prisoners in 1997. This number represents a substantial increase from 1996, when 45 executions took place; indeed, the 1997 number is the largest since 1955. The states with the highest number of execution were: Texas (37); Virginia (9); Missouri (6); Arkansas (4); and Alabama (3). All 74 people executed in 1997 were men. The report classifies 45 of those executed as white, 27 as black, one as Asian, and one as American Indian; it further notes that five of the total number were of Hispanic descent. According to the report, an additional 3,335 individuals are now on death row in 34 states and the federal prison system -- 1,876 whites, 1,406 blacks, 28 American Indians, 17 Asians, and 8 of other races. This total includes 238 Hispanics and 44 women. Finally, the report notes that as of November 30, 1998, 18 states had executed 58 inmates, with Texas and Virginia accounting for half the total (17 and 12 respectively).

9. Crime -- COPS Retention: Earlier this week you asked about how a new COPS initiative would deal with the issue of retention. Currently, we plan to set aside $50 million for one-year waivers to assist economically-distressed communities in absorbing long-term costs of their new police hires. Addressing the retention issue on a case-by-case basis through waivers will allow us to avoid creating an incentive for local police departments to depend on federal grants indefinitely. Such an approach will also require law enforcement agencies to demonstrate hardship before receiving a fourth year of funding. In FY 98, Congress earmarked a $100 million in COPS funding for a retention initiative that targeted smaller jurisdictions, which are the ones most at risk of failing to meet their long-term funding commitment. At the time, we feared that this program might encourage these smaller departments to apply for additional assistance -- and not meet their original funding obligations. Ultimately, however, only $13.4 million of this retention funding was spent due to limited demand. Thus, we believe that $50 million should be sufficient to address the issue of retention in a new COPS initiative.

10. Crime -- Preliminary 1998 FBI Crime Statistics: On Sunday, the FBI will release the crime figures collected through the Uniform Crime Reporting System for the first six months of 1998. The preliminary data show a 5 percent decline in overall crime compared to the half-year figures of 1997, with violent crime down 7 percent, and property crime down 5 percent. Specifically for violent crime, murder decreased 8 percent; robbery, 11 percent; and 5 percent each for aggravated assault and rape. For property crime, larceny dropped 5 percent; motor vehicle theft 8 percent; burglary 3 percent; and arson 12 percent. Serious crime declined in each region of the country, with the Northeast experiencing the greatest decline in serious crime (8 percent) followed by the West (6 percent), the South (5 percent), and the Midwest (one percent). Cities of all sizes reported decreases in serious crime, with the greatest declines reported by cities with populations between 50,000 to 99,000 (8 percent) and over one million (6 percent). The smallest declines in serious crime were reported by cities with populations of under 10,000 (3 percent). (Note to EK: All of percentage declines are for the number of offenses, not rates.)

11. Welfare Reform -- Work Participation Rates: We just received (but have not yet published) the first work participation statistics from the welfare reform law. The data show that 36 of the 38 states that were required to meet the law's all-family participation rates in FY 1997 succeeded in doing so. (The remaining states began implementation of the welfare law later and need not meet participation rates until FY 1998.) As you recall, these rates require states, in the first year of the law's implementation, to ensure that 25 percent of all welfare families include an adult who works at least 20 hours each week. (States can get credit toward meeting the work participation rates by reducing their caseloads.) Only Nevada and the District of Columbia failed to meet this requirement, and even they may give HHS enough additional data in the next few weeks to come into compliance. States fared less well, however, in meeting the law's separate work participation rates for two-parent families, who comprise seven percent of the total caseload. These rates require states to ensure that 75 percent of two-parent welfare families include an adult who works at least 35 hours per week. Only 20 of the 38 states met this strict requirement; the failing states now must enter into corrective action plans with HHS to avoid financial penalties.

12. Welfare Reform -- Teen Birth Trends: A study by the Centers for Disease Control issued last week provided some new details about the previously reported 15 percent decline in the national teen birth rate from 1991 to 1997. The report showed declines in teen births for all races and ethnic groups and in all states. In addition, the report showed a steep decline (about 21 percent) in the rate of second births to teens during this period. Second births currently comprise about one-fifth of total teen births.

13. Children and Families -- Infant Mortality and Life Expectancy: Another new study issued by the Centers for Disease Control last week showed positive trends on infant mortality and life expectancy. The study reported that the U.S. infant mortality rate -- a measure of the death of babies under one year old -- reached its lowest level ever last year. The 1997 infant mortality rate was 7.1 deaths per 1,000 births, which is about 3 percent lower than the 1996 rate of 7.3 deaths per 1,000 births. The drop in infant deaths came despite a 7.5 percent increase in the number of low birthweight babies and a two percent increase in the number of births by women late in their childbearing years. In addition, the study reported that Americans' average life expectancy rose to an all-time high of 76.5 years in 1997. This increase is due in part to falling death rates from major diseases and from accidents, homicides, and suicides. For example, deaths from AIDS dropped by 47 percent in 1997. The most dramatic improvement in life expectancy was among black males, whose expectancy increased by 1.2 years to 67.3.

14. Children and Families -- Single Fathers Data: The Census Bureau released data today showing that the number of single fathers with children at home has increased 25 percent in the past three years, from 1.7 million to 2.1 million. These men now account for one in six single parents, joining a total of 9.8 million single mothers. About 35 percent of all single fathers have never married, while more than half of single fathers with children under six have not done so. According to the report, single fathers have higher incomes than single mothers and are more likely to live with another person (mother, girlfriend, etc.) who helps with child care.

15. Abortion -- New Abortion Study: The Alan Guttmacher Institute (AGI) released a study on Friday showing the lowest nationwide abortion rates since 1975. The study reports that from 1992 to 1996, the number of abortions performed fell from 1,529,000 to 1,366,000, and the abortion rate decreased from 26 to 23 per 1,000 women aged 15-44. The report attributed most of this decline to effective contraceptive methods, especially among teen-agers, and a consequent decrease in unintended pregnancies. The study also reported a sharp decline in the number of facilities providing abortions during this period, although it suggested that this decline was not a major factor in the lower abortion rates. The total number of facilities providing abortions decreased 14 percent between 1992 and 1996, with the greatest decline among hospitals (18 percent decrease) and physicians' offices (26 percent decrease), rather than clinics (two percent decrease). Less than 10 percent of total abortions are now performed in hospitals and doctors' offices. Finally, the study examined the prevalence of dilation and extraction procedures -- i.e., so-called partial birth abortions. According to the report, doctors at 14 hospitals or clinics performed about 650 of these kinds of abortions in 1996 (out of a total of 1.36 million abortions). The large majority of these procedures were performed between 20 and 24 weeks into a pregnancy.

16. Community Empowerment -- Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (CDFI): The Treasury Department recently provided the DPC with summary statistics on the CDFI awards made during the first three years of funding (1996-98). Since its creation, the CDFI Fund has made a total of 196 awards to 164 institutions. Of the institutions receiving awards, 139 were already established and 25 were startup. Of the startup institutions, 9 were full-service financial institutions -- banks, bank holding companies, and credit unions -- and 16 were more specialized financial institutions such as microenterprise funds, venture capital funds, and business loan funds.

You also asked why 50 cents raises only $30 billion while last year's 62 cent increase raised $65 billion. A few points (some obvious and some obscure):

- 1) Last year's increase was $.62 in year 1 and rose to $1.10 in year 5.
- 2) The 50 cent score is on top of the state settlement and thus every cent of tax raises less revenue because the state settlement price increase is assumed to have lowered purchase volume.
- 3) Last year, the industry payments were inflated by 3 percent each year (due to the June 20th provision requiring them to do so). This year, the expected inflation level of 2.3 percent is used.
- 4) Last year, OMB assumed 93 percent of tobacco volume was cigarettes. This year, they are using Treasury's assumption that 97.5 percent of taxed tobacco is cigarettes. This means a given industry payment translates into a slightly lower price per pack.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Bruce Reed
Elena Kagan

RE: DPC Weekly Report

Education -- National Education Goals Panel: The National Education Goals Panel released its annual progress report on Dec. 10. The report, which summarized previously released data, highlighted improvements in the school readiness, math achievement, and the participation of women and minorities in math and science in higher education. The Goals Panel also had a lengthy discussion of the future of the goals and the goals panel. There is strong consensus on the panel that we should continue to pursue national education goals after 2000, especially since the goals will not be met by that deadline. There is also a pretty strong consensus to continue to have a bipartisan, intergovernmental reporting panel, though critical Republican members including Engler and Goodling were not present and have not weighed in on this. Finally, Sen. Bingaman urged that you convene a summit in order to elevate the national goals and reenergize the process started at the Charlottesville Summit. Gov. Hunt and members of the business community also argued for some kind of high profile process that would engage the American public and culminate in a set of national education goals. While these are appealing ideas and could conceivably help restore some measure of bipartisanship to the education debate, we and Secretary Riley believe that we must first determine that there will be significant support from Republican governors and Jeffords and Goodling before proceeding supporting any such effort by the Goals Panel.

Education -- GED: In response to your inquiry on this matter, we have learned that the American Council on Education is responsible for the developing and administering the GED. There is interest in the Education Department in figuring out how we might go about strengthening the GED, and DPC and Education Department staff will soon begin to discuss this with ACE.

Health Care -- CDC releases guidelines for HIV surveillance: This week, the CDC released their draft guidelines to assist States in the design and implementation of new HIV surveillance systems. Representatives from the HIV/AIDS community were nervous about the CDC's proposed recommendation to States that they use name based surveillance systems to track the epidemic. Through discussions with HHS, we were able to ensure that CDC left States with the option of creating surveillance systems that used unique identifier codes that provide demographic information without identifying individuals by name. To date, the guidelines have been relatively well received by the AIDS community. However, because the confidentiality issues associated with HIV surveillance are incredibly sensitive and of high interest to the community, questions and concerns about the CDC draft guidance may be raised at your meeting with the AIDS Council on December 18th. In response, you can indicate your support for alternatives to name based reporting and explicitly indicate your support for States like California, who are actively exploring developing these alternative systems.

Health Care -- Meeting of the Presidential Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities: On Tuesday, the Vice President will meet with the Presidential Task Force on the Employment of Adults with Disabilities and accept their first report. Although a number of the Task Force's recommendations require new investments and need to be considered within the context of the budget process, many of the administrative actions they recommend can be implemented immediately. As a result of this report, the Office of Personnel Management will develop a plan to increase the representation of adults with disabilities in the Federal workforce and the Small Business Administration will launch a new outreach campaign to improve opportunities for Americans with disabilities. The Vice President will also take the opportunity to reiterate the Administration's commitment to passing a strong enforceable patients' bill of rights to improve the quality of care for people with disabilities at Tuesday's meeting. This report lays a solid foundation for a number of disability initiatives that are likely to be included in this year's budget, including funding for the Jeffords-Kennedy Work Incentives Improvement Act.

Health Care -- Swearing in of Dr. Jane Henney as FDA Commissioner: On Tuesday, the Vice President will swear in Dr. Jane E. Henney, the first woman and first oncologist to be Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration. We expect a large audience consisting of representatives of consumer protection groups and advocates for the food, pharmaceutical, and device manufacture industries to attend.

Health Care -- Dean Ornish Update: Following up on your interest in the status of Dr. Ornish's request to establish a cost-effectiveness demonstration on programs like his "Life Style Intervention," we obtained a commitment from Nancy Ann Min DeParle that she would indicate her openness to and support for the type of demonstration that he seeks. She is meeting today (Friday) and, although no final agreement will be reached on the scope, size and financing of the demonstration, we expect Dr. Ornish to be pleased with the result of the meeting. We will stay on top of this issue to ensure that an acceptable final outcome is reached.

Crime -- Capital Punishment: This Sunday, the Justice Department will release a bulletin on the death penalty indicating that in 1997, 17 states executed 74 prisoners. This is 29 more executions than in 1996, and the largest annual number since 1955 (76 executions). The states with the highest number of execution were: Texas, 37; Virginia, 9; Missouri, 6; Arkansas 4; and Alabama, 3. All of those executed in 1997 were males, and by race: 45 were white; 27 were black; one was Asian and one was American Indian. Of this number, 5 were of Hispanic descent. There were an additional 3,335 men and women on death row in 34 states and the federal prison system: 1,876 whites, 1,406 blacks, 28 American Indians, 17 Asians and 8 of other races. This total includes 238 Hispanics and 44 women. Nearly two-thirds of inmates with death sentences had previous felony convictions, including 9 percent with at least one prior homicide conviction. The report also notes that as of November 30, 1998, 18 states had executed 58 inmates, with Texas and Virginia accounting for half the total (17 and 12, respectively).

Welfare Reform -- Work Participation Rates: We now have in hand the very first work participation data from the new welfare reform law. The data show that 95 percent of states met the first year requirement to have 25 percent of all families on welfare engaged in work activities. These data are from the last quarter of FY 1997, when the new work rates applied to 38 states plus D.C. (the remaining states implemented the new law after March 1997 and didn't have to meet the work rates until FY 1998). Nevada and D.C. failed to meet the rate, although they may make the target based on additional information they are providing to HHS.

As you may recall, the participation rate measures the proportion of families on welfare with an adult in work activities for at least 20 hours per week. States get a credit for caseload reductions to help account for people who leave the rolls and go to work. States are also required to ensure that 75 percent of two parent families have a parent who works at least 35 hours per week. Only 20 of the 39 jurisdictions met this test, which applies to 7 percent of welfare families. As required by law, HHS will impose financial penalties of up to 5 percent of a state's TANF grant for failing to meet the work rates, but a state will have an opportunity to enter into a corrective compliance plan which, if it succeeds in increasing work rates to the required level, will preclude the penalty.

Welfare Reform -- Positive Teen Birth Trends Continue: A new study by the Centers for Disease Control shows encouraging news about teen birth rates. The study provides new detail regarding the previously reported 15 percent decline in the national teen birth rate from 1991 to 1997. The most striking finding was the decline in the rate of second births to teens, which fell 21 percent from 1991 to 1996. Second births comprise about one-fifth of total teen births. In addition, the report showed declines in teen births for all races and ethnic groups and in all states.

Children and Families -- New Data on Infant Mortality and Other Health Indicators: A new study published in the journal of Pediatrics, based on 1997 data compiled by the Centers for Disease Control, reported new data on rates of infant mortality, low birthweight, teen births, and life expectancy. First, the study reported that U.S. infant mortality rates reached their lowest level in history last year. The 1997 infant mortality rate -- a measure of the number of deaths before a baby turns 1 -- was 7.1 deaths per 1,000 births, which was about 3 percent lower than the 1996 rate of 7.3 deaths per 1,000 live births. The drop in infant deaths came despite a 7.5 percent increase in the number of low birthweight babies, and an increase of about 2 percent in the number of births by women late in their childbearing years. In addition, the study reported that births to teen-age mothers fell in 1997 for the sixth consecutive year to 52.9 births per 1,000 females ages 15 to 19 -- 3 percent lower than the 1996 rate of 54.4 and 15 percent lower than the 1991 rate of 62.1. Finally, the study reported that Americans' average life expectancy rose to an all-time high of 76 ½ years. This increase is due in part to falling death rates from major diseases and from accidents, homicides and suicides. For example, deaths from HIV or AIDS dropped by 47 percent in 1997. The most dramatic improvement in life expectancy was among black males, whose expectancy increased by 1.2 years to 67.3.

Abortion -- New Abortion Study: This week, the Alan Guttmacher Institute (AGI) released a new study on abortion incidence and services based on a survey of all known abortion providers in the United States. The study showed that, from 1992 to 1996, the number of abortions performed fell from 1,529,000 to 1,366,000, and the abortion rate decreased from 26 to 23 per 1,000 women aged 15-22. In that period, the number of facilities providing abortions fell sharply -- by 14 percent, with the greatest decline among hospitals and physicians' offices rather than clinics. The AGI study concluded, however, that factors other than access to abortion -- such as the decreasing rate of unintended pregnancies -- have had more influence on the abortion rate. The study also examined the prevalence of dilation and extraction procedures (so-called "partial birth" abortions), and found that, in 1996, an estimated 650 of these procedures were performed (out of a total of 1.36 million abortions), with the large majority of these performed at 20 to 24 weeks.

Community Empowerment -- Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (CDFI): The Treasury Department recently provided the DPC with summary statistics on the CDFI awards made during the first three years of funding (1996, 1997, and 1998). In Putting People First, you called for the creation of "a network of community development banks to provide small loans to low-income entrepreneurs and homeowners in inner cities." Since its creation, the CDFI Fund has made a total of 196 awards to 164 institutions. Of the institutions receiving awards, 139 were already established, and 25 were startup. Of the startup institutions, 9 were full-service financial institutions -- banks, bank holding companies, and credit unions -- and 16 were more specialized financial institutions such as microenterprise funds, venture capital funds, and business loan funds. Below is a detailed chart summarizing the statistics on the CDFI awards:

FROM: Bruce Reed
Elena Kagan

RE: DPC Weekly Report

Education -- National Education Goals Panel: The National Education Goals Panel released its annual progress report on Dec. 10. The report, which summarized previously released data, highlighted improvements in the school readiness, math achievement, and the participation of women and minorities in math and science in higher education. The Goals Panel also had a lengthy discussion of the future of the goals and the goals panel. There is strong consensus on the panel that we should continue to pursue national education goals after 2000, especially since the goals will not be met by that deadline. There is also a pretty strong consensus to continue to have a bipartisan, intergovernmental reporting panel, though critical Republican members including Engler and Goodling were not present and have not weighed in on this. Finally, Sen. Bingaman urged that you convene a summit in order to elevate the national goals and reenergize the process started at the Charlottesville Summit. Gov. Education -- ESEA Reauthorization: We have been working closely with the Education Department on the development of a reauthorization proposal for ESEA. Our work has focused on fashioning a set of accountability requirements -- significantly stronger than those in current law -- that would require states and local school districts that receive funding under ESEA to (1) immediately identify and undertake significant and sustained interventions to turn around the lowest performing schools; (2) phase out the use of unqualified teachers, including particularly those who are not fully certified and those teaching out of field; (3) phase out the use of instructional aides as primary instructors, especially in high poverty schools; and (4) require students to meet standards for promotion. We believe that if we can design these requirements appropriately, we will take a big step toward fundamentally changing the nature of federal assistance in elementary and secondary education. In the past the primary purposes of federal aid have been to compensate for the historic failures of states and local communities to educate the most disadvantaged students, and to encourage states and local school districts to undertake various quality improvements (e.g., higher standards, more computers, smaller classes). Under the proposals we are developing, the federal government would, after a suitable time to phase in the requirements, no longer invest in education systems that are not serious enough to insist on, and enforce, higher standards for students, teachers and schools.

Education -- GED: In response to your inquiry on this matter, we have learned that the American Council on Education is responsible for the developing and administering the GED. There is interest in the Education Department in figuring out how we might go about strengthening the GED, and DPC and Education Department staff will soon begin to discuss this with ACE.

The AGI study concluded, however, that factors other than access to abortion -- such as the decreasing rate of unintended pregnancies -- have had more influence on the abortion rate. The study also examined the prevalence of dilation and extraction procedures (so-called "partial birth" abortions), and found that, in 1996, an estimated 650 of these procedures were performed (out of a total of 1.36 million abortions), with the large majority of these performed at 20 to 24 weeks.

Community Empowerment -- Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (CDFI): The Treasury Department recently provided the DPC with summary statistics on the CDFI awards made during the first three years of funding (1996, 1997, and 1998). In Putting People First, you called for the creation of "a network of community development banks to provide small loans to low-income entrepreneurs and homeowners in inner cities." Since its creation, the CDFI Fund has made a total of 196 awards to 164 institutions. Of the institutions receiving awards, 139 were already established, and 25 were startup. Of the startup institutions, 9 were full-service financial institutions -- banks, bank holding companies, and credit unions -- and 16 were more specialized financial institutions such as microenterprise funds, venture capital funds, and business loan funds. Below is a detailed chart summarizing the statistics on the CDFI awards:

GED. In response to your inquiry on this matter, we have learned that the American Council on Education is responsible for the developing and administering the GED. As you know, the credibility of the GED has eroded considerably in recent years because its standards have remained fixed (and relatively low) while secondary school, institutions of higher education and employers have focused intensely on raising standards. ACE is in the process of upgrading the GED to keep up with state efforts to raise standards, and plans to unveil a new test in 2001. DPC and the Education Department will work to determine how we can best help adult education programs, community colleges and school systems prepare people for the strengthened GED.

Study: Abortions Lowest in 20 Years

NEW YORK (AP) -- Effective contraceptive methods have contributed to the lowest nationwide abortion rate in more than two decades, according to a new study released this week.

But the United States still has a high abortion level compared with other developed Western countries. And poor women in rural America have the hardest time having their pregnancies ended.

The U.S. decline in abortions was accompanied by a drop in the number of providers, some of whom may have been frightened by anti-abortion violence, according to The Alan Guttmacher Institute, which published the study.

"When providers face harassment or violence from anti-abortion groups, and abortion is a very small part of their revenue, it may not be worth doing it," said Stanley Henshaw, author of what experts consider the most accurate look at abortion in the United States.

Abortions between 1992 and 1996 among women ages 15-44 decreased from about 1.5 million to 1.4 million, the lowest rate since 1975. That year, the abortion rate was 22 per 1,000, compared to 23 in 1996. About 1 million American women had abortions in 1975.

Still, the number of abortions in the United States was higher than in many other Western developed countries, the study said. In 1995 in Sweden, the rate was 18 per 1,000; 16 in Canada; 15 in England and Wales; and six in the Netherlands. Russia's rate was 68 per 1,000 and Romania's 87.

Henshaw said much of the drop in the U.S. figures reflects more effective contraceptive methods, especially among teen-agers.

During the four years through 1996, the number of facilities providing abortions dropped from 2,380 to 2,042, a decline of 14 percent. For last year, with data still incomplete, that trend appears to have continued, according to the study, "Abortion Incidence and Services in the United States, 1995-1996."

The institute found no abortion providers in 86 percent of all U.S. counties; among rural counties, 95 percent provided no abortion services. And abortion was unavailable in 89 of the 320 cities surveyed, or 27 percent.

The greatest decline in services was among hospitals and physicians' offices -- respectively 18 percent and 26 percent -- where women in rural areas tend to have abortions. Less than 10 percent of the total abortions are performed at such facilities, compared to clinics, whose services generally have declined by only 2 percent by 1996.

Of the 338 fewer facilities noted in the study, a decrease of 20 or more was registered in California (down 62 to 492), New York (down 23 to 266), North Carolina (down 27 to 59) and Pennsylvania (down 20 to 61).

All states had at least one provider in 1992, as they did in 1996; North Dakota and South Dakota had only one each in both years surveyed.

Several areas experienced increases in services: New Jersey, Utah and the District of Columbia.

The study, conducted among residents of communities from July 1997 to March 1998, is published in the November/December issue of the institute's journal Family Planning Perspectives.

The Guttmacher Institute, a not-for-profit organization based in New York and Washington, focuses on reproductive health research, policy analysis and education.

Here are the Treasury Enforcement requests:

1. ATF -- Total appeal of $29.325 million. Half of this $14.232 is for Brady/YCGII -- our priority -- and the remainder is for a series of other ATF enhancement, including $6 million for tobacco compliance, $6 million for their crime lab, etc. This should be a big priority for us.
2. Money Laundering -- $29.4 million for a Custom's money laundering initiative. I'm not sure of the details, but they claim it's for efforts like Casablanca and to develop a National Anti-Money Laundering Strategy, as required by legislation signed into law this year.
3. Drugs -- $62.628 million for Custom's drug and border enforcement, including new agents, inspectors and x-ray machines along the border. McCaffrey should be pushing for this, too.
4. Counterfeiting -- $13.616 for the Secret Service to acquire advanced technologies to help them fight high-tech counterfeiters and identity theft. Identity theft is an up and coming issue. We signed legislation on it this year.
5. Cybersmuggling/Child Porn -- $8 million for Customs to hire more agents and computer specialists to crack down on the "cybersmuggling" of child porn into the country. Their successful cases in this area have received lots of press attention.

Here is the ESEA summary. I'm doing some quick homework on the GED item now ESEA Reauthorization. We have been working closely with the Education Department on the development of a reauthorization proposal for ESEA. Our work has focused on fashioning a set of accountability requirements -- significantly stronger than those in current law -- that would require states and local school districts that receive funding under ESEA to (1) immediately identify and undertake significant and sustained interventions to turn around the lowest performing schools; (2) phase out the use of unqualified teachers, including particularly those who are not fully certified and those teaching out of field; (3) phase out the use of instructional aides as primary instructors, especially in high poverty schools; and (4) require students to meet standards for promotion. We believe that if we can design these requirements appropriately, we will take a big step toward fundamentally changing the nature of federal assistance in elementary and secondary education. In the past the primary purposes of federal aid have been to compensate for the historic failures of states and local communities to educate the most disadvantaged students, and to encourage states and local school districts to undertake various quality improvements (e.g., higher standards, more computers, smaller classes). Under the proposals we are developing, the federal government would, after a suitable time to phase in the requirements, no longer invest in education systems that are not serious enough to insist on, and enforce, higher standards for students, teachers and schools.

D R A F T

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

The preliminary crime data released by the FBI today confirm that crime rates in America will continue to decline substantially for a seventh straight year. During the first six months of 1998, serious crime fell by another 5 percent -- with large reductions in murder and other violent crimes leading the way. If these trends hold for the remainder of the year, we will have cut the nation's murder rate by one third since I took office. This is remarkable progress, and it shows that our strategy of more police, tougher gun laws and better crime prevention is making a difference. But our work is far from down. In the coming, as we finish the job of putting 100,000 more police on the streets, we must continue to do everything we can to make all of our communities safer.

The abortion clinic safety proposal for the FY 2000 budget had two main provisions -- funding for security assessment and funding for direct provision of security measures to clinics; funding for both has been estimated at $4 million.

The Justice Department has asked that we pull the abortion clinic safety proposal from the budget process because 1) they feel that they can and will do security assessments under current FY 99 funding and 2) because funding for direct provision of security measures will require authorization. They believe that they will be able to provide direct grants (and a possible grant announcement) for security assessments some time in the near future, but have not provided us with a date. While to some degree we are persuaded by this new analysis, we wanted to seek your guidance before we agreed to remove this from our set of priorities.

TEXT:

Bruce, we've dug around a bit more to find out what Archer said on these issues but it doesn't sound like there's much more there there at this point.

On 11/20, Archer delivered the Republican response to the President's radio address on social security, followed by a news conference. He used the news conference to lay out the 4 elements of the Ways & Means agenda for 1999: 1) tax cuts, 2) social security, 3) fighting protectionism, 4) "welfare reform part two". Among the accomplishments he cited was moving people from welfare to work. That's all he said in his statement and in a release. In response to a question from a reporter asking "what are some of the changes you see for welfare", Archer said:
"We must continuously monitor the welfare reform program. It is not a process that has ended; it is a continuing process. And there are two things that I want us to focus on: I want us to focus on abstinence education. We are finally beginning to see a decline in teenage pregnancies and out-of-wedlock births. We should do everything we can to hasten that. And secondly, we need to give the states even more flexibility in the use of the block-grant funds for child care."

Based on issues raised to the committee in the past (and high on states' agenda), and comments from Ron, we think the last statement could refer to several things:

1) expanding the definition of assistance to make it easier for states to spend TANF funds on child care w/o invoking the TANF requirements such as time limits, reporting requirements and assignment of child support rights (the TANF NPRM included child care subsidies to individuals w/in the definition of assistance, and HHS does not believe they have statutory authority to change this interpretation even if we wanted to w/in the final rule).

2) expand transferability from TANF to CCDF (child care fund) and/or SSBG to give states more ways to spend TANF $ on child care for a broader low income population and w/o the TANF requirements. Currently, states can transfer up to 30% to CCDF, including up to 10% to SSBG. But, TEA-21 reduced the SSBG transfer to 4.25% beginning in 2001 and as you know, OMB has a proposal to institute this cap in 2000 to help pay for SSBG restoration.

3) -- this is purely speculation on my part, but the reference could be to the child care block grant rather than the TANF block grant, in which case maybe he's talking about some kind of credit for moms staying at home ??

Ron had indicated to HHS staff right after the Archer statement that there wasn't any more detail to share, but they are following up to see if anything's changed.

Re: Archer's point on abstinence education, while the trends for teen births and teen pregnancies are positive, the preliminary 1997 data from NCHS on out of wedlock births to all age groups shows numbers and rates holding steady (though there are caveats because CA and NY changed the way they report marital status in 1997). Also, just as a reminder, PRWORA did set aside $50 M annually for grants to states for abstinence only education. All states applied and received grants in 98, and I believe all states also applied for 99 (last I checked the 99 grants had not been finalized). Perhaps he's thinking about increasing this funding level??

Spoke w/Michael about the Budget and new initiatives pot. He was unsure about how much came out of the new initiatives pot, but thought the $650 million COPS add-on was the most likely candidate (thought he didn'y believe it was at risk from OMB or DOJ's perspective). If that's the case, we should assume the following about the $1.3 billion in COPS II funding:

1 $650 M in COPS sealed by DOJ deal. This includes:

- $300 M in passback for COPS hiring;
- $200 M in DOJ technology initiatives (Brady, sex offenders, DNA/crime labs, comm.); &
- $150 M in original base for community/juvenile prosecutors.

2. $650 M COPS add-on from new initiatives pot, and supported by DOJ, including:

- $300 M in extra hiring money (can include new race earmark, allows 10,000 more cops);
- $150 M add-on for technology (includes crime forecasting, DNA backlog, etc.); &
- $50 M add-on for prosecutors (includes non-hiring programs Holder/DOJ wants);
- $150 M for community crime prevention (only new prevention/innovative $ in budget).

Again, at the end of the day, the overall COPS II $ can be somewhat fungible.

DOJ is meeting w/the AG today to go over state/local law enforcement budget one more time. Once she's on board with our outline, DOJ will fight money being taken away for other non-crime initiatives. My guess is that they would be least offended by cuts to the hiring monies, as opposed to toys and soft stuff...jc3

Along with FDA and Bill Schultz, we have been talking to the food safety groups about the initiative. The groups had been fearful that FDA was planning on turning over federal responsibility to the states, while weakening federal inspection generally. After Carol Tucker Foreman and Caroline Smith Dewall understood from FDA that the state program was adding to, not subtracting from federal efforts, she and Caroline called to say they are comfortable supporting the program. Schultz thinks there was a communication gap. Carol said they also wanted to talk to the head of the parents group STOP tonight to get them on board as well, but that the groups now understood and supported the project.

In addition to the Secretary, the head of the National Highway Safety Board, the President of MADD and other safety advocates will attend. I've heard that later that day, the President of MADD is coming to the WH for a photo op with the First Lady to "tie a ribbon" against drunk driving.

2. Regarding the Cabinet Affairs entry on CDC/impaired driving -- it looks like CDC released a fact sheet on Friday on impaired driving which uses 1997 data announced earlier this summer by the Department of Transportation. (We did a Presidential statement on some of these numbers in August.) I've called HHS to figure out whether their CDC document contains additional analysis to the DOT data which may be of interest. It appears that the fact sheet was released to press.
