CEQ has been working with DOJ and OMB to prepare an announcement of an environmental crimes initiative. Attached is a draft Presidential directive to the Attorney General for inclusion in the announcement. The directive focusses on the communities right to know, restitution, and help from the FBI for local law enforcement. I think that DOJ is likely to be of the view that a directive is unnecessary, however I believe that a directive highlights the President's personal commitment to actions that will protect communities from environmental harm.

Draft (proposed by Diane Regas)

Memorandum on Protecting Communities from Environmental Crimes

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN_ITALIC

July xx, 1996

Memorandum for the Attorney General

Subject: Protecting Communities from Environmental Crimes

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN

We have made tremendous progress over the last twenty years in protecting public health and the environment from toxics and other pollution. Most Americans and most companies do all they can to protect our environment. Yet a few bad actors still endanger families, communities and law enforcement officers by violating environmental laws.

When toxic wastes are transported and dumped illegally the harm can extend to police officers, fire fighters, paramedics, and to families who live next door. Pollution illegally dumped into a river can contaminate the drinking water of communities downstream, and pollute the fish that people eat from the river. In the last few years several spills have devastated the wildlife in rivers across America. Many of these environmental insults can persist for months and years-

-threatening communities, undermining family security and reducing the value of neighborhood homes.

For too long communities have not had the right to know when environmental laws are violated. People want to know where toxic wastes have been found-

-and what is being done to hold these criminals accountable for the damage they have done.

Law enforcement and prosecutors across the country need every tool we can give them to protect their communities from environmental insult-

-large or small. Protecting the environment and enforcing our important environmental laws can be the province of every local prosecutor. We can do more for communities, local law enforcement and victims of environmental crimes.

That is why I am directing you to take a number of important measures that will improve protection for communities from environmental offenders.

First, I want you to strengthen the protection for communities when the federal government undertakes prosecution of environmental cases. Communities have a right to know about environmental violations near their homes, and violators need to be held accountable for the harm they have done. Accordingly, I am directing you to require that all Assistant United States Attorneys seek community notification of environmental violations in all environmental prosecutions.

Second, you should take steps to make victims of environmental crimes whole. In particular, restitution of environmental harm should be sought whenever it is in the public interest.

Finally, I want you to work with state and local officials -- governors, attorneys general, legislators, district attorneys, and judges -- to ensure that the federal government is doing everything it can to help local officials prosecute environmental violators. In particular you should determine how the FBI can provide additional training to law enforcement officials on the federal laws and resources available to protect the health and environment of America's communities.

To achieve these objectives, I expect you to identify funding where and when appropriate. You should report to me in writing by December 1, 1996 on the specific steps you will take to develop this policy.

William J. Clinton

The agreement would result in the settlement of a number of claims w/the purchaser besides the Warner Creek sale issue, and would involve payment of about $475,000 from the government to the purchaser. The proposed agreement will now go to both the civil and env. division at Justice for review. USDA is quite concerned that unless the agreement is approved quickly, it could fall apart. Unfortunately, while the details of the proposed agreement remain confidential, the fact of settlement discussions was leaked to the media.

DOJ and the Forest Service are concerned that the settlement not send the wrong signal about protests and the willingness of the gov. to settle. Either or both of you may hear more about this over the next couple of days.

I just received your note requesting "the more general" product liability letter so that you can compare them. The attached email contains the most recent draft that I worked on. However, as you probably recall, we also sent out some Presidential letters that were simply shorter versions of the detailed product liability letter -- here is that letter:

Thank you very much for your kind words regarding my veto of product liability legislation.

As you know, I believe our legal system needs reform, and I have repeatedly urged Congress to pass limited, meaningful product liability measures. However, I vetoed the product liability bill Congress sent to me because I concluded that it unduly interfered with state authority and tilted the legal playing field against consumers.

I look forward to your continued involvement as my Administration works with Congress on this matter.

ATT SUBJECT: product liability form letter

ATT TO: Elena Kagan (KAGAN_E)

TEXT:

Elena--

The President has received a good deal of mail over the past couple of months from the general public relating to product liability reform. About 75% of the letters deal with the legislation that the President vetoed and 25% deal with product liability reform in general. As you may know, for the most part my office does not usually see letters from the general public; rather, we respond to letters from elected officials and other vips.

The office that opens the President's letters categorizes mail from the general public as it comes in, but, for instance, the letters that have been written regarding the product liability legislation are clumped together with the general letters on this topic. Therefore, in responding to all of these letters, we need to craft a single letter that deals with product liability as a whole, but that also addresses the legislation that Potus vetoed. I've written a draft, and I'm wondering if you can give me some guidance on what would be appropriate for Presidential response.

You've been very helpful over the past few months, and I really appreciate your help.

Here's my draft:

Thank you very much for sharing your thoughts regarding product liability. I appreciate having your perspective on this issue. My Administration believes our civil justice system can and should be improved. In this effort, we must ensure that reform is respectful of the state's important role in the federal system, as well as fair to all parties.

Earlier this year, I vetoed the product liability bill because it went against this belief. Not only did it inappropriately intrude on state authority, it also seriously impaired the ability of consumers to gain fair and adequate compensation for their injuries. In particular, I opposed completely eliminating joint liability for non-economic damages, placing arbitrary caps on punitive damages, and restricting a person's right to sue after fifteen years without regard to the useful life of the product in question.

I continue to believe that Congress can pass limited, but balanced, product liability reform, without resorting to measures which would harm the consumer. As I continue working with Congress to achieve this end, I appreciate having your perspective and encourage you to stay involved in the future.

thanks,
Jeff

Hi Elena,

Following is this draft for your approval/edits. Thanks!

Thank you for writing to me about the Teamwork for Employees and Managers Act.

My Administration supports workplace flexibility and high-performance workplace practices that promote cooperative labor-management relations. I firmly believe that in order for America to remain globally competitive into the next century, employers and employees must work in partnership with each other to encourage innovation, improve productivity, and enhance efficiency and performance in the workplace.

I cannot approve legislation that, instead of promoting genuine teamwork, undermines the system of collective bargaining that has served this country so well for many decades. By allowing employers to establish company unions where no union currently exists and permitting company-dominated unions where employees are in the process of determining whether to be represented by a union, this bill would abolish protections that ensure independent and democratic representation in the workplace. As we continue our efforts to encourage true workplace cooperation, I look forward to your continued involvement.

The following is a draft signing statement for the gambling commission bill. Please direct any comments to Tim Johnson (JOHNSON_TD) by 2:00 TODAY. Thank you. [Text follows.]
STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I have today approved H.R. 497, the "National Gambling Impact Study Commission Act." This Commission will conduct a comprehensive study of the social and economic impacts of gambling in the United States.

The creation of this Commission will help draw attention to the growth of the gambling industry and its consequences. Too often, public officials view gambling as a quick and easy way to raise revenues, without focusing on gambling's hidden social, economic, and political costs. Public officials need to consider carefully all of the effects of gambling, and the Commission will report on these effects to the President and the Congress.

The Commission's study will address various types of betting, whether conducted in a casino, on a river boat, on the Internet, on an Indian reservation, or anywhere else in the United States. In addition, the study will address gambling sponsored by governmental, commercial, philanthropic, or charitable entities. Such a balanced study will be invaluable to public officials as they make policy decisions concerning this important issue.

The legislation grants the Commission limited subpoena authority to get the information it needs to carry out its purpose, while protecting the privacy of information given to the Commission that would disclose the identity of any person or business entity or any other information protected by the Privacy Act. The bill also authorizes the Commission to request information from any Federal agency, which may use its discretion and judgment in withholding privileged and sensitive information.

My Administration supported the establishment of this Commission, and I am pleased to sign H.R. 497 into law.

IN THE WHITE HOUSE AND AROUND TOWN:

- o House passes minimum wage bill. Today, the House passed by a vote of 354-72 a bill that will raise the minimum wage from $4.25 per hour to $4.75 effective Oct. 1 and, on Sept. 1, 1997, to $5.15. The legislation also includes $21.4 billion in tax breaks through 2006 for businesses, homemakers, students and couples adopting children.
- o Clinton claims unemployment figures show strong economy. The unemployment rate rose today, but President Clinton saw good news in the addition of new jobs, saying today: "It was reported this morning that our economy produced nearly 200,000 more new jobs in July, further good news for the American people that our economy is growing and creating good jobs. Thanks to the hard work of employees and businesses here in our country, we now have the economic equivalent of our Dream Team: strong growth, millions of jobs; low inflation, low unemployment, and growing incomes. That's the lineup we want for America."
- o Clinton contrasts Democrats' "progressive, mainstream achievements" with GOP "extremism." President Clinton hosted an end-of-session gathering at the White House today for Democratic congressional leaders. Said Clinton: "On this last day before Congress goes home, I wanted to invite the Democratic leadership down to the White House to thank them for their hard work and eventual successes on behalf of the working families of this country. The Congress is going to send me two measures that this caucus has worked hard on for a long time -- the minimum wage bill, which also has some important help for small businesses, incentives to invest more in the business and to make it easier to take out retirement plans; and, of course, the Kennedy-Kassebaum health bill, which will help millions of Americans have access to health care." The Democrats interrupted Clinton with applause when he paid tribute to Senator Ted Kennedy, calling him "absolutely superb in the debates in the Senate" on both the minimum wage and health care issues. "These issues have been very key to our party, our caucus and to me and my Administration for a long time now. And I'm very, very happy about it. We're in a lot better shape than we were a year ago." Clinton also cited "two major environmental legislative victories -- the Safe Drinking Water Act and one on pesticides, which I think are very, very important." Clinton continued: "And I'm very pleased that we've been able to move away from some of the extremism of the last two years into a position where we can get some things done for the American people. So I think the American people have a lot to be proud of. I think the progressive, mainstream achievements of this caucus are things that they can go home and be proud of in August. I have to say that this has been, on balance, a very good week for the American people."

- o Clinton says he'll continue to fight for more anti-terror legislation. At this morning's meeting with congressional Democrats, President Clinton said he was "deeply disappointed that the antiterrorism package, which had been agreed to by our caucus and our leadership and the leadership of the Republican Party, apparently is not going to pass because the same folks who opposed the crime bill in '94 and the Brady Bill are not going to permit it to pass in the House. And I am disappointed about that. I'm disappointed that we can't pass anything on the taggants yet, the explosives, because that's a big problem in domestic terrorist incidents. But I think we have to keep working on it because this problem will not go away." Asked by a reporter if Congress's failure to pass an anti-terrorism bill would become a campaign issue, Clinton said: "Well, I believe that this ought to pass, and, you know, I have done my best not to make this a partisan issue, this terrorism issue. This is a national security issue just as much as devising a defense in the Cold War was a national security issue -- that we tried to develop a bipartisan position on dealing with terrorism, dealing with the proliferation of weapons, dealing with the consequences for freedom-loving people everywhere of all the racial and ethnic and religious and tribal and political hatred in the world today. These are the national security issues of the 21st century. And so I can tell you that I think it is legitimate for those of us who believe more should be done to continue to press for more to be done. But I am going to do my best to try to fashion a bipartisan majority in America for this."
- o Clinton says he's happy for Lindsey. President Clinton was asked this morning to comment on yesterday's not-guilty verdict in the trial of Arkansas bankers Herby Branscum and Robert Hill. Clinton responded briefly: "I'm very pleased, close to home here, that Bruce Lindsey was completely exonerated, as I felt certain he would be. And I'm happy for the people involved. And I have nothing to add to what has been coming out of the stories in Little Rock."
- o Clinton meets with apparel industry about working conditions. Today, following press reports of poor working conditions for some apparel industry workers, President Clinton met with the industry leaders to discuss the issue. Said Clinton after his meeting, "I've just had a very productive meeting with representatives of some of our nation's largest apparel and footwear companies, as well as representatives of labor, consumer, human rights and religious groups. They all accepted my invitation to meet here today to deal with an issue that is rightly on the minds of millions of American consumers. Just a year ago today, the discovery of more than 70 people working in virtual slavery behind barbed wire in a garment factory in El Monte, California, awakened Americans to the fact that some of the clothes and shoes they buy are manufactured by people who work under deplorable conditions. The well-documented episode involving Kathie Lee Gifford also awakened many people to this problem. We all are outraged by these awful revelations, but as leaders, we have a responsibility to do something about them. When Kathie Lee learned that some of the garments with her name on them were being produced under terrible working conditions, she didn't bury her head in the sand. Instead, she reacted quickly, decisively, and responsively. That's what all the rest of us must do as well."

Added Clinton: "Our nation has always stood for human dignity and the fundamental rights of working people. We believe everyone should work, but no one should have to put their lives or health in jeopardy to put food on the table for their families. That's why I'm pleased to announce that the companies gathered here today have agreed to begin working together to put an end to this terrible problem. They have agreed to do two things. First, they will take additional steps to ensure that the products they make and sell are manufactured under decent and humane working conditions. Second, they will develop options to inform consumers that the products they buy are not produced under those exploitative conditions. They have agreed to report back to me within a maximum of six months about their progress."

- o GOP crowds over its legislative accomplishments. Today, congressional Republicans held a joint press conference to trumpet their recent successes. "We're all part of the most significant Congress in a generation," said Rep. John Boehner. Added Sen. Trent Lott: "I have to tell you that the last two weeks has probably been my most exciting time in all of my years in Congress over the past 23 years. I have seen legislative teamwork, hard work, like I have never seen before, and it has produced results. ... And when you look at what has happened over the past 18 months, there has been a burst of action and production in the Congress that we haven't seen in 30 years. We have produced, and we're going to continue to do that." According to Lott: "We've seen Congress go from gridlock to Olympic gold." Added Lott: "The only problem we've had is a lot of our good work has been subject to vacillation by the President and, in far too many instances, against the best interests of the American people," it was "vetoed" by Clinton.
- o US reaches agreements with Japan on computer chips and insurance. The US and Japan have reached agreement during their negotiations in Vancouver on American access to Japan's computer chip and insurance markets, Clinton Administration officials say this morning. Details of the deal were expected later today from Acting Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky. Both sides are calling the agreement a victory. Barshefsky told reporters the deal "is responsive to the views of the Clinton Administration and to the views of the government of Japan." Japanese Trade Minister Shunpei Tsukahara said, "The contents are almost exactly the same as Japan's version of the plan."
- o Clinton to press Croatian president on elections. President Clinton was to meet with Croatian President Franjo Tudjman today. In an effort to move the peace process along, Clinton will reportedly press Tudjman to influence ethnic Croats in Mostar to accept the results of the June 30 elections that gave Muslims in that city a slight majority on the city council.
- o Delay in sending welfare bill to Clinton could put off Wisconsin decision. A decision on whether the Clinton Administration will continue its review of Wisconsin's experimental welfare plan could be delayed by a possible Republican plan to wait on sending new welfare legislation to President Clinton for his signature. Wisconsin is seeking waiver of Federal law in order to proceed with its plan known as W-2, and sources close to the issue are divided on whether Congress' new legislation -- which Clinton has said he will sign into law -- would make the W-2 application moot. According to presidential adviser Bruce Reed: "When the bill becomes law, Wisconsin should be able to do the welfare reform plan that they submitted to us." However, a line in the new welfare reform bill's conference report apparently says the "conferees urge the Secretary [of Health and Human Resources] to approve the Wisconsin comprehensive welfare reform waiver request" in spite of the passage of new Federal law.

Although the new bill has the backing of both chambers of Congress, Republicans have reportedly been considering a plan to hold the welfare bill temporarily and send it to Clinton for his signature as the Republican National Convention winds up. The HHS official said today: "Typically, they would enroll the bill and we would have legislative language by next Tuesday or Wednesday. If [Republicans] choose instead this delaying tactic of waiting in order to make the President sign the bill just before his convention, if they go down that road, it would take considerably longer and we would just have to wait for the language."

Added the official: "We haven't seen the actual legislative language yet, and there are several provisions in the bill and in the accompanying report having to do with waivers." Saying the new bill "gives flexibility to design your own programs, which is essentially block grants," the official said: "What Wisconsin needs to do is look at the waivers they already have, because they have three. They need to figure out if they want to keep them and what the interaction is between those waivers and the Federal law. And then they have to figure out, on the waiver submission that's pending for W-2, whether they even need it anymore, or whether they just might want part of it." Added the official: "Most states, including Wisconsin, will not even need waivers anymore, but we at HHS have not prejudged that."

Meanwhile, Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson is continuing his push for permission to start the W-2 program. Even before the House and Senate voted on the welfare conference report, Thompson issued a statement on the bill, saying it "is a positive step forward and it will allow us to pursue the work portion of W-2, but it does not go as far as W-2 in terms of providing health care to the working poor." Added Thompson: "I hope that President Clinton will not use this legislation as an excuse to walk away from W-2 and our proposal to help the working poor by allowing them to participate in our health care system, thus insuring that their children will have adequate medical care."

- o Key issues still unresolved on securities, but conferees remain optimistic. Despite a report to the contrary, a congressional source reports this morning that no deal has yet been reached on the Securities and Exchange Commission fees issue -- the major stumbling block preventing a quick wrapup of the securities regulation reform conference. At issue is a House proposal that would phase the SEC into a straight appropriation, terminating the fee collections that currently pay for its operation. The House included the proposal to go to a straight appropriation because the SEC annually collects about $400 million in fees in excess of its operating needs, which it turns over to the Treasury for deficit reduction. The Administration has objected to the House proposal because, while the SEC would remain level funded under the House measure, the $400 million contributed annually to deficit reduction by the SEC is not accounted for in the House bill. Consequently, the Administration and congressional Democrats are concerned that the Commerce-Justice-State appropriation would have to take an additional $400 million hit. The C-J-S appropriation bill proved to be one of the most hotly contested budget debates last year between the Administration and the Republican Congress.

A report today suggesting a compromise has been reached between the House negotiators and OMB, wherein OMB will accept an offer made by House Commerce Committee Chairman Thomas Bliley to cut fees by $2 billion over ten years, is "completely inaccurate," according to a congressional source. The source contended, "OMB is not ready to accept Bliley's compromise offer," adding that contrary to the report, "OMB officials did not meet with any Senate conferees at all. The [Senate] Appropriations Commerce subcommittee markup doesn't affect the talks in any way." Reportedly, the Senate has included in its FY 97 C-J-S markup the Bliley SEC fees compromise proposal. An OMB official also said there is no deal and that OMB continues to negotiate "in good faith" on the issue.

The congressional source suggested that the Bliley compromise is meant to spread the budget pain out over several years, potentially meaning smaller C-J-S discretionary cuts in the next few years, which might be more politically palatable. However, the source said "while you can make the numbers do anything," nevertheless, there remains a "significant philosophical gulf" between the Administration's position and House negotiators. In addition, according to the source, it's not clear that smaller reductions in SEC fee collection would satisfy some House members who want to end the practice of collecting excess fees as quickly as possible. The source emphasized, however, that the mere existence of the compromise proposal is a "positive sign," noting the House negotiators are putting in "a lot of work into trying to resolve the fee issue" in an effort to conclude a successful conference.

Nonetheless, according to the congressional source, other important issues which need to be resolved have yet to be discussed, kept in abeyance by the activity on the fees issue. But the source emphasized that conferees remain optimistic about reaching an agreement and producing a conference report for congressional floor action in September.

- o VP speculation increases. With Bob Dole expected to announce his running mate selection soon, speculation is growing among GOP insiders as to who Dole will choose. The current conventional wisdom among political reporters and some Republicans is that former South Carolina Governor Carroll Campbell is at the top of the list. Former Education Secretary and Drug Czar Bill Bennett appears to be rising into the "serious candidate" status, although his name is mostly floated by Republicans outside the Dole camp. Among insiders, Senator John McCain is seen as a very real possibility, with a few actually believing Dole has already made the selection.
 - o Lamm reportedly to name Zschau as running mate Monday. Several California papers are reporting this morning that Reform Party candidate Dick Lamm will name former San Jose Congressman Ed Zschau as his running-mate. The San Francisco Chronicle and the San Jose Mercury News are citing unnamed sources close to the Lamm campaign in reporting that the announcement will be made at the Tech Museum of Innovation in San Jose on Monday. A Lamm campaign source told the Bulletin this morning: "I can confirm the story's true, but I can't say anything else. I can tell you that there's a major announcement Monday in San Jose, California." Zschau is a former two-term congressman and the 1986 GOP Senate nominee in a close race against Democratic Senator Alan Cranston. Zschau currently teaches at Harvard Business School.
- Meanwhile, Lamm is currently campaigning from Denver, conducting tv and radio interviews. He is scheduled to appear at the Kansas Reform Party convention this weekend, and will reportedly travel to Florida in addition to California next week.

- o Clinton campaign accepts proposal for free-TV time, with conditions. Clinton-Gore '96 campaign manager Peter Knight, in a statement, outlined the conditions by which the campaign will participate with the proposal of the Free TV for Straight Talk Coalition for free air time. Knight stated: "As the President stated in his radio address earlier this year, providing television time for the presidential candidates to directly address the American people on issues of importance to the country is an important and exciting opportunity. The Clinton/Gore campaign is fully committed to supporting these efforts." Knight then outlined criteria for the Clinton campaign's participation: "First, there should be no adverse consequences whatsoever to the presidential and vice presidential debates that may be agreed upon. We are firmly committed to those debates and do not wish to do anything to obstruct them. The format and structure of the debates have become institutionalized after refinements that were made over numerous campaign cycles and provide an invaluable way to inform the citizens of the country about the candidates and their positions.

"Next, we believe that the public interest would be best served if these broadcasts were conducted live, with no preconditions to the locations of the broadcasts. Our acceptance of the proposal is provisional on these conditions." Knight added that the Clinton campaign "has also accepted the formal offers set forth by NBC and CNN in their letters of late June. ... The campaign is also in the process of reviewing numerous other offers of free candidate time that have come from other media organizations."

- o Former White House Travel Office employee to make flight arrangements for Dole campaign. Gary Wright, who was among the seven fired White House Travel Office employees, has been hired by Republican Presidential Travel, a Republican air-charter outfit that leases Bob Dole his campaign plane. Wright will help make flight arrangements, and is expected to report to work after the Republican National Convention.

Hi Elena,

Following is language in response to Reddy's incoming re: Uniformed Div of Secret Service for your edits/approval. The language is from the F.O.P questionnaire. Thanks for all your help!

Thank you for writing to me. I appreciate knowing your views on this issue, and I have shared your letter with the Office of the Counsel for their review.

As you may know, the Department of Treasury has raised several concerns about the modification of Executive Order 12171 in such a way as to allow the Uniformed Division of the Secret Service to unionize. I have only recently been informed of where this situation stands and so have an open mind on the issue. My counsel, Jack Quinn, is currently reviewing both sides of this issue and will present a recommendation to me on whether and, if so how the Executive Order should be modified.

Re: Title IX/Equal Opportunities for Girls and Women In Sports

Because the President will be making remarks tomorrow regarding title IX, I have prepared the following memo. The memo includes brief background information on title IX and four points of controversy surrounding title IX that could be raised during Q&A.

Background

Title IX prohibits sexual discrimination at educational institutions that receive federal funds. It is part of the Education Amendments of 1972 that President Nixon signed into law.

Title IX is used to provide equal opportunities for girls and women in school athletic programs. Most private colleges are subject to Title IX guidelines just as public colleges and universities are because both receive federal funds through financial aid programs such as Pell Grants.

Title IX has paved the way for female athletes and sparked a new level of excellence in women's sports. In this year's Olympics, a record

-setting total of about 3,700 women competed from here and abroad.

Data show that girls who play sports in school have a reduced risk of becoming pregnant or dropping out of school, have higher levels of self

-esteem, and reduced risks for osteoporosis and breast cancer.

Controversy Surrounding Title IX

1) Since the Spring of 1992, several substantial law suits charging noncompliance with title IX have been brought against universities, the most notable of which is against Brown University. Brown decided to reduce its financial support for the women's volleyball and gymnastics teamsto raise some of their own funds. The Department of Justice filed an amicus brief in Cohen v. Brown University. The Court ruled against Brown. However Brown appealed and the suit continues.

2) More recently, members of the U.S. Congress argued that title IX does not mean better opportunities for women athletes, but rather destruction of men's athletic programs. In 1995, Rep. Dennis Hastert (R

-IL) organized House members to sign and send a letter to the Department of Education calling for "common sense" revisions to title IX such as to omitting men's football from title IX regulations. The Department of Education agreed to review title IX regulations. Currently, the Office of Civil Rights of the Department of Education is working on guidelines outlining what actions are appropriate to prevent sexual harassment and discrimination in schools. The guidelines will be issued sometime over the next two months.

3) A recent Texas court case determined that educational institutions with knowledge of sexual harassment between students that do not take corrective action are not violating title IX. This decision has been very controversial and may advance to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court is deciding this week whether or not it will hear the case.

4) For an institution to be Title IX compliant, it must show its female student

-athlete ratio to be proportionate to its female student population. The NCAA conducted its own gender equity probe in 1991 and found that over 80 percent of the dollars were going to men's programs and that 75 percent of the athletes were men.

We will meet at 4:00 pm in Room 213, OEOB, to discuss the policy elements of the environmental event now scheduled for next week. The purpose of the meeting is to review the proposals now on the table, and to identify (and resolve) any differences of views among WH agencies before proceeding to a larger interagency meeting tomorrow. A number of concerns have been raised by various offices, and we will be expecting a number of deliverables from the agencies, so your attendance at this meeting is most important. Thanks for your help and cooperation.

TEXT:

The Secret Service has asked for an updated office access list.

By way of background, the Secret Service Control Center maintains a list of people who have access to each room on the Complex. If someone does not have a key with them to a particular room, a Secret Service Officer can open the room for them if that person is on the corresponding access list.

I have updated the list in terms of who is currently working in each room, but also realize that you may want other people to have access to your office (for example, if you are out of town and you want someone else to be able to get into your office).

I would appreciate it if you could give me a list by Friday of anyone, other than yourself, who should have access to your office or any other room over which you have responsibility.

Please call me if you have any questions.

Thanks!
Marna

I've already left voice mails for most of you (many seem to be on vacation, a place I will be beginning tomorrow), but I wanted to follow up with an e-mail to pass on some comments from Sally. She'd like it if folks would fax to her on the Cape their draft boilerplate language (Elena - Federalism; Jeremy - Family; Linda and Tom - Takings). She's anxious to review the drafts so we can begin the phone calls to the agencies as soon as possible. I will be back the week of the 26th and plan to pull us all together quickly to coordinate the language and the calls.

Sally's fax number is (508) P8/(b)(6). Thanks for all your help. [007]
