I heard that the House may offer to the Senate:

- 1) Labor runs formula part of program; HHS gives competitive grants
- 2) 90% formula, 10% competitive, but could increase to 15% competitive if needed to keep Senate HHS-advocates happier
- 3) No set-asides within competitive for rural or cities
- 4) Lower small state minimum to .25% (which is good for cities)
- 5) Senate performance bonus, which is bad for us.
- 6) House provisions on Pennington
- 7) Keep Amerasians, Cuban-Haitians, but not Kennedy too-disabled-to naturalize or Medicaid 5 year ban exemption for kids

All around, not a bad deal for us. We're not supposed to know this, so don't let Republicans know we do.

Major arguments continue between the Senate and the House on FLSA; SSI State Supplements; and future disabled legal Immigrants.

Weekly Report -- July 17, 1997
Cynthia Rice

Welfare -- Counties: "Counties are making welfare reform work," said a report released this week by the National Association of Counties, by "using the flexibility granted in the new law to develop innovative programs that are best suited to their local needs." The report profiles successful efforts in four counties (Fulton County, GA; Santa Clara County, CA; Dade County, FL; and Hennepin County, MN) to provide transportation, child care, and public sector jobs; to assist legal immigrants losing federal benefits; and to create collaborative partnerships between the public, private, and non-profit sectors. The report notes that NACo opposed the welfare law, but commends the Administration and Congress for addressing counties' primary concerns, funding for job creation and benefits for legal immigrants. The report also emphasizes that "the need for transportation services is tremendous. It was the most common thread that linked all counties and outpaced all other concerns as their most urgent need...The reauthorization of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act including new funds to help those who are making the transition from welfare to work is therefore paramount."

[EK--the report never says "welfare reform is working"--its tone is "challenge and opportunity".]

Welfare -- Budget Conference Update: The House and Senate conferees have exchanged welfare reform offers, which settle some of the minor issues regarding the structure of the $3 billion welfare to work program and benefits for legal immigrants. However, all the most contentious issues are still on the table: disability and health benefits for disabled legal immigrants; minimum wage, worker protections, and hours of work for workfare participants; privatization of Food Stamp and Medicaid operations; and whether the $3 billion welfare to work program should be operated by HHS or the Department of Labor (the House agrees with us that DOL should be the lead agency; the Senate so far disagrees). We have been working at all levels to ensure that the Congressional negotiators understand our views on these issues.

Here's what the Welfare to Work Partnership is planning for the mid-August St. Louis event, which some of us will discuss with them at today's 4:00 meeting w/Ann Lewis et. al.

The St. Louis event which will be part of a "Welfare to Work Week" of probably three events
(we would be involved only in the St. Louis event):

The St. Louis event, which will launch their local welfare to work campaign which will in time include 6 to 12 cities;

A press club event in D.C. with small business, releasing data from Coopers and

Lybrand survey showing many small businesses want to hire welfare recipients, but see challenges in doing so, and underscoring the Partnership's commitment to providing them with technical assistance to be successful;

A media event in Milwaukee with the mayor and Governor Thompson on August 22nd celebrating the success of welfare reform in that city.

In St. Louis, the Partnership wants to:

1) Release its print and radio public service announcements with a "This is good for business, and good for the country" theme, and providing a toll free number (1-888-USA-JOBS) number for companies to call who want to learn more about hiring welfare recipients.

2) Release its Blueprint for Business, a 50 page guide for companies who want to hire and retain welfare recipients

3) Unveil their web page (www.welfaretowork.org), which will contain a copy of the Blueprint, forms for companies to sign up as Welfare to Work "partner" (what they call companies that have made the commitment), and other information. (Eventually, companies will be able to accept the database of services through the web site, but they don't expect to have that ready by mid-August).

4) Announce 300 plus corporate commitments in St. Louis and release the packet of information they've prepared for these companies, outlining service providers, state assistance, and local success stories. They are working to secure a commitment from the Ford Foundation, Strive, and others to provide funds for services in the 6-12 cities; if they're ready, they'll announce that too.

They plan the day itself to look like:

8:00 - 11:00 am: Session for local business and service providers, with breakout sessions, addresses by the mayor and Eli Segal to be held at the downtown Marriott.

Early afternoon: Event at Keiner Plaza, and open air amphitheatre in downtown St. Louis. Like on May 20th, they're planning a very long program: the CEO of Monsanto; a local success story; the mayor; Eli Segal; the Governor; the President. They have a plan for a high tech visual which will project behind the speakers the signatures of the St. Louis companies pledging their commitment during the event (the CEOs would be signing during the event, and as they signed, the signatures would appear on stage).

The repubs are meeting with themselves over the weekend. We should expect "real" meetings with the Administration to begin as early as Monday. the Republican leadership is supposed to be meeting with the various committees today to tell them to get moving. Lack of action next week will be more likely to result in the budgeteers jumping in. (although they have threatened this before...)

I will keep you posted if I hear anything different. Besides getting prepared for a tough week I do not think we will be needed this weekend, but Barry I will need to be able to get in touch with you and you should be able to get in touch with everyone else.

On immigrants -- yesterday at the budgeteers level the discussion focused on a strict interpretation of "only doing what is in the agreement and nothing more" this extended to the immigrant provisions. I think this is the attempt of the republican leadership to get back in control in some way of this proces where they have been loosing ground publicly and have been unable to guide the work of the authorizing committees. Stay tuned.

Dear Mr. Connerly:

Thank you for your recent letter supporting my effort to lead a national dialogue over the next year on issues of race and reconciliation. Of all the challenges this country faces, building one America is one of our most important undertakings. I intend to share your letter with my Advisory Board on Race who are eager, as they help me in this endeavor, to hear from a broad range of Americans and with varying opinions on matters of race.

I share your admiration for President John F. Kennedy and his philosophy of equality among and between the races. You and I also share the goal of achieving a society in which discrimination against anyone on the basis of race no longer exists. Our disagreement is over on some of the tools we must use in order to achieve our shared goal.

A large part of your letter discusses affirmative action which, while not perfect, has been one of the most effective tools used to achieve diversity within institutions and to address problems of a lack of equal access to opportunity. As I stated in my commencement address to the graduates of the University of California-San Diego, as a society, we cannot avoid the unfortunate fact that racial, ethnic and gender discrimination continues to exist. We see evidence of it every day. We also see continuing evidence of the enormous benefits that diversity brings to institutions which demonstrates daily the need to preserve the gains made at those institutions that have shown such progress in achieving diversity. As I have said, I welcome suggestions as to other measures we might take that will combat the effects of past discrimination, but don't believe that ending affirmative action at this time would achieve the ends you profess to want. Quite the contrary, such a move would be quite disruptive. I have yet to be presented with a tool which will work as well with no less disruption.

The recent plummet in minority enrollment in California and Texas state universities is persuasive evidence that tailored affirmative action plans, are still needed to ensure that underrepresented students in those states have access to institutions of higher education and also to enhance the breadth of experiences and knowledge that all students can draw from a diverse student body. I look forward to working with these states to develop creative responses to this problem that I am sure concerns us all. However, these distressing developments also demonstrate that now is clearly not the time to simply do away with affirmative action.

While I disagree with you that the time has come for us to be able to eliminate affirmative action, at the same time, I am committed to ensuring that affirmative action, particularly when undertaken by the federal government, is fair, balanced, flexible and extended only to qualified recipients. I firmly believe that diversity and excellence walk hand in hand. And, I am proud to say that the quality of my appointees in my administration as well as the judges I have nominated, fully bears out this belief.

Further, my Administration has worked diligently to reform affirmative action programs across the federal government to ensure that they are narrowly tailored to a compelling governmental interest. The Supreme Court indicated in Adarand that there is room for affirmative action programs provided they meet these criteria. The Administration is working within these requirements to preserve equal opportunity within the federal government in employment, contracting and elsewhere.

Again, thank you for your letter. While we disagree on the important issue of affirmative action, I urge you to reach out to my Advisory Board on Race to continue the dialogue and seek the solutions that we will pursue throughout the year.

Civil Rights Investigations of Higher Education in California and Texas

In response to a complaint filed by several civil rights organizations, the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) at the Department of Education will investigate the current admissions policies at the three University of California law schools: Boalt Hall, UCLA, and UC-Davis. The investigation will determine whether the policies violate Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by having a discriminatory impact on minority students. Preliminary analysis shows a significant disparity in the admission rate for certain minority group students compared to whites. The investigation concerns current admissions policies, rather than the widely-reported decline in minority admissions following the discontinuation of UC's affirmative action program.

An extensive OCR-initiated investigation of the Texas higher education system, begun in February, 1997 as part of a series of state higher education desegregation reviews, is continuing. The review will determine, consistent with the Supreme Court's Fordice decision, whether vestiges of past discrimination remain in the Texas system. A chapter of the National Black Law Students Association filed a complaint with OCR last fall, asserting that Texas continues to operate a dual system of higher education and challenging the state's implementation of the Hopwood decision. In April, OCR informed the association that its Title VI allegations would be reviewed as a part of the existing investigation, while OCR plans to refer the group's Fourteenth Amendment allegations to the Department of Justice.

Vocational Education Bill

The Perkins vocational education reauthorization bill, H.R. 1853, should reach a House floor vote soon. This week Democrats and Republicans reached a compromise on a within-state funding formula and other provisions that target more funds to low-income and urban areas, thus avoiding a highly partisan vote. The bill would achieve several administration goals, including the consolidation of numerous existing set-asides into a flexible state grant. However, serious concerns remain, including poor accountability for performance, limits on the use of industry-recognized skill standards, and still-inadequate in-state targeting as compared to existing law. The Department of Education hopes to address some of these problems in the Senate.

National Testing Initiative: There were several related developments affecting the national testing initiative this week. The House appropriations subcommittee mark-up includes a provision requiring the National Academy of Sciences to complete an evaluation of the development and field-testing of the national tests before we can proceed to administer the tests. This provision was inserted at the request of Mr. Goodling. The Education Department had already been planning to contract such an evaluation with NAS, so there is no fundamental objection to this provision. We are working with Mr. Obey's staff to ensure that the timelines for completing the study are reasonable given the work to be done, and will produce information in time for next year's appropriations process. We believe this can be accomplished.

Second, Diane Ravitch and Checker Finn have launched an attack on our testing effort -- through an article in the Weekly Standard and in a letter reported in the Washington Times. They have criticized the Administration for failing to provide a governing role for NAGB over the national tests. This is a step we would like to take, but haven't yet because it would require new legislation. At the request of Frank Riggs, who chairs the relevant subcommittee and who supports the testing initiative, we have not submitted legislation pending our collective ability to move Mr. Goodling to a more favorable stance on the tests. Both Checker and Diane are fully aware of the need to work with Riggs and Goodling on this issue.

While we do not believe these attacks have yet caused significant harm, we are concerned that they could over time. Therefore, we are exploring the possibility of providing NAGB with the needed statutory authority through the conference on the appropriations bill, and have begun to discuss this prospect with key Senate staff.

National Testing Initiative and Civil Rights Groups: Secretary Riley met last week with Chris Edley and representatives of a number of civil rights groups, to listen to their concerns about the testing initiative. Their concerns included (1) the possible use of the tests for tracking students, (2) the prospect that too many students would be excluded from taking the tests; (3) the prospect that the tests would be used for high stakes purposes without also relying on additional information from other tests and from classroom performance; (4) the need to provide parents with information about how they can use test score information to help their children and to hold school accountable; and, (5) their view that the Education Department should require participating states and school districts to disaggregate the test score results by school district, school and demographic subgroup.

While few of these concerns are new or unique to our tests, there are several specific responses we can make. The Education Department is developing material that will provide information to parents about how to use the test results. With regard to reporting requirements for participating states and school districts, while we and the Education Department agree with the idea of disaggregating the data, we have been reluctant to add specific reporting requirements to states or cities that use the tests. Further, it is increasingly common practice among states and school districts to report disaggregated data at the school and district level, and the Title 1 requirements reinforce this. While we don't think our policy should change, it could be helpful if your rhetoric about the tests emphasized that the results should be incorporated into school report cards and used for accountability purposes. You could do this almost immediately -- next week when a number of large cities sign up for the tests, and the following week at NGA

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Bruce Reed
Elena Kagan

RE: DPC Weekly Report

1. Welfare -- Counties: "Counties are making welfare reform work," said a report released this week by the National Association of Counties, by "using the flexibility granted in the new law to develop innovative programs that are best suited to their local needs." The report profiles successful efforts in four counties (Fulton County, GA; Santa Clara County, CA; Dade County, FL; and Hennepin County, MN) to provide transportation, child care, and public sector jobs; to assist legal immigrants losing federal benefits; and to create collaborative partnerships between the public, private, and non-profit sectors. The report notes that NACo opposed the welfare law, but commends the Administration and Congress for addressing counties' primary concerns, funding for job creation and benefits for legal immigrants. The report also emphasizes that "the need for transportation services is tremendous. It was the most common thread that linked all counties and outpaced all other concerns as their most urgent need...The reauthorization of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act including new funds to help those who are making the transition from welfare to work is therefore paramount."

[EK--the report never says "welfare reform is working"--its tone is "challenge and opportunity".]

2. Welfare -- Budget Conference Update: The House and Senate conferees have exchanged welfare reform offers, which settle some of the minor issues regarding the structure of the $3 billion welfare to work program and benefits for legal immigrants. However, all the most contentious issues are still on the table: disability and health benefits for disabled legal immigrants; minimum wage, worker protections, and hours of work for workfare participants; privatization of Food Stamp and Medicaid operations; and whether the $3 billion welfare to work program should be operated by HHS or the Department of Labor (the House agrees with us that DOL should be the lead agency; the Senate so far disagrees). We have been working at all levels to ensure that the Congressional negotiators understand our views on these issues.

3. Education -- Vocational Education Bill: The Perkins vocational education reauthorization bill, H.R. 1853, should reach a House floor vote soon. This week Democrats and Republicans reached a compromise on a within-state funding formula and other provisions that target more funds to low-income and urban areas, thus avoiding a highly partisan vote. At the request of Frank Riggs, who chairs the relevant subcommittee and who supports the testing initiative, we have not submitted legislation pending our collective ability to move Mr. Goodling to a more favorable stance on the tests. Both Checker and Diane are fully aware of the need to work with Riggs and Goodling on this issue.

While we do not believe these attacks have yet caused significant harm, we are concerned that they could over time. Therefore, we are exploring the possibility of providing NAGB with the needed statutory authority through the conference on the appropriations bill, and have begun to discuss this prospect with key Senate staff.

7. Education -- National Testing Initiative and Civil Rights Groups: Secretary Riley met last week with Chris Edley and representatives of a number of civil rights groups, to listen to their concerns about the testing initiative. Their concerns included (1) the possible use of the tests for tracking students, (2) the prospect that too many students would be excluded from taking the tests; (3) the prospect that the tests would be used for high stakes purposes without also relying on additional information from other tests and from classroom performance; (4) the need to provide parents with information about how they can use test score information to help their children and to hold school accountable; and, (5) their view that the Education Department should require participating states and school districts to desegregate the test score results by school district, school and demographic subgroup.

While few of these concerns are new or unique to our tests, there are several specific responses we can make. The Education Department is developing material that will provide information to parents about how to use the test results. With regard to reporting requirements for participating states and school districts, while we and the Education Department agree with the idea of disaggregating the data, we have been reluctant to add specific reporting requirements to states or cities that use the tests. Further, it is increasingly common practice among states and school districts to report disaggregated data at the school and district level, and the Title 1 requirements reinforce this. While we don't think our policy should change, it could be helpful if your rhetoric about the tests emphasized that the results should be incorporated into school report cards and used for accountability purposes. You could do this almost immediately -- next week when a number of large cities sign up for the tests, and the following week at NGA

8. AIDS -- Needle Exchange: The House Labor/HHS Subcommittee of Appropriations marked up their bill on July 15 without a challenge to the Chairman's mark which preserves the waiver authority of the Secretary of HHS. HHS (Kevin Thurm) and the AIDS advocates have been assured by the staff directors for Reps. Porter and Obey that no unfriendly amendments are expected at full committee. This is great news so far, however we are anxiously watching, waiting, and keeping our fingers crossed.

We are in daily contact with a number of AIDS organizations on this issue and continue to assure them that we are prepared to fight to preserve the Secretary's authority should the need arise.

9. AIDS -- Decreases in the AIDS Death Rate: On Monday, July 14 the CDC released new figures showing a 19% decrease in the AIDS death rate in the first 9 months of 1996, compared with the same period in 1995. The CDC attributed these findings to greater access to medical care and the development of effective therapies for HIV and associated opportunistic infections. The AIDS advocates noted that as AIDS death rates decline, there are increasing numbers of individuals living with HIV who require access to these lifesaving interventions.

We are continuing to emphasize that, while we are delighted with the news of the drop in death rates, we must not forget that rates of infection are on the rise in women, people of color, and adolescents. The epidemic is not over.

10. Crime -- Juvenile Crime Bill Update: On Tuesday and Thursday, the Senate Judiciary Committee met to mark-up S. 10, Senator Hatch's juvenile crime bill. While the Committee did not get much work done, it did vote down Senator Kohl's amendment on child safety locks by a one-vote margin. Senator Hatch offered to work with Democrats over the weekend to limit the number of pending amendments (87) and complete action on S. 10 next week.

I am faxing the following documents:

1. Memo to the President
2. Cabinet contacts' numbers
3. WH working group contacts' numbers
4. WH outreach list for the race initiative
5. Draft of Cabinet briefing agenda
6. Website memo

Per our discussion (Rob and me) on the phone re. the Cabinet briefing, here are a few details. First of all, a Cabinet briefing is simply a meeting held by Erskine in which staff literally brief the Cabinet on various priority issues. The race initiative will be one of three (see agenda). Sylvia recommends that the race initiative cover the following four areas:

- 1) policy process (provided by Elena Kagan);
- 2) agency best practices (we will have agency memos on Monday);

- 3) dialogue (how to pursue dialogue within and without agencies)
- 4) other ideas (ie host dinners with academics, mayors, others for outreach / ideas)

As we discussed, please feel free to call me this weekend. Also, know that Cabinet Affairs, Elena and I will be here to work with you next week to make this a fruitful discussion and briefing.
