Thank you for your message regarding tobacco products.

Tobacco use is a common but deadly habit. Each year, more than 400,000 Americans die prematurely from tobacco-related illness. Most started smoking as children.

We must work hard to reduce the number of children who become addicted to tobacco products and have their lives cut short as a result. Even though it is illegal in every state for youth to smoke, some 3,000 boys and girls take up smoking every day. Among smokers ages 12 to 17, 70 percent already regret their decision to smoke and two-thirds say they want to quit.

That is why last August I announced a tough new FDA regulation limiting minors' access to tobacco and curbing the promotion and advertising that enhance the appeal of tobacco products to young people. In February, I was proud to announce that the first parts of the regulation went into effect. From now on, no one under age 18 may buy tobacco products, and retailers must check photo IDs for anyone under the age of 27 who wishes to purchase tobacco products.

The tobacco industry has opposed the FDA rule in the courts. In an historic step forward for public health, a Federal District Court held in April that the FDA can regulate nicotine-containing tobacco products, and that the provisions I announced in February will remain in effect.

I was disappointed, however, that the court overturned provisions in the FDA rule designed to prevent tobacco companies from marketing their products to children. These provisions would, among other things, ban outdoor billboards within 1,000 feet of schools or playgrounds and eliminate the use of images and colors that appeal to children in most advertising. Government lawyers have appealed this part of the court's ruling. Overall, however, the court's decision was a landmark and historic one for the nation's public health and for our children.

The recent settlement agreement proposed by the state attorneys general, the tobacco industry, and others provides another potential opportunity to take a major step forward for the public health. Congress would have to approve the agreement before it goes into effect. I have asked my domestic policy advisor, Bruce Reed, and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Donna Shalala, to carefully review the agreement with Administration staff over the next several weeks, to listen to public health experts, and to help me ensure that any agreement that goes forward to Congress is in the best interest of the public health, especially the health of our children.

Thank you for your comments...

There are three forms which HHS is proposing to implement through an emergency process. The forms will be published in the Federal Register, the public will comment, and HHS can change them in response to comments. Then, OMB must agree to let them go forward to be used on an interim basis (until the final regulations are promulgated).

Substantively, I don't think we have a problem with these. Process-wise, HHS totally dropped the ball on all of these, and with the result that I didn't get a call from Monahan until late Wednesday and states weren't told anything until today. The forms are:

1) Data Collection: the list of data states will have to provide HHS. It tracks the list in the statute (i.e, demographic information on recipients, work participation status), and it should have been in place before July 1 (states with TANF plans approved before January 1 are supposed to start reporting data on July 1). It will be shown to the world via the Federal Register on Monday, then reviewed by OMB probably for several weeks before it goes ahead.

2) Two Financial Forms --- one for Child Care, one for TANF, which asks states for certain financial information about how they are spending their funds.

Tobacco Update -- This week Secretary Shalala and I held several productive outreach meetings. Tuesday we met with industry lawyers and gained a better understanding of their position. Wednesday we hosted Farm Bureau representatives from tobacco states, accompanied by Governor Hunt. The growers urged us to maintain the current tobacco quota and price support program; require industry to use mostly U.S.-grown tobacco; and provide transition assistance as the demand for cigarettes falls. Thursday the Vice President hosted former tobacco industry scientists turned whistleblowers who shared their knowledge with us of the industry's research into nicotine and "reduced risk" cigarettes. Finally, we also met this week with the Senate Democratic tobacco task force, chaired by Senator Conrad.

Next week we expect to brief the House Democratic tobacco task force, begin meetings with key committee chairmen, and wrap up our meetings with the public health community. We will also complete an executive order restricting smoking in federal buildings for a signing event the following week.

EDITORIAL NOTEBOOK / By BRENT STAPLES

Forty Acres and a Mule

Bill Clinton has earned a boat-load of scorn since suggesting that he might apologize for slavery, as some in Congress have suggested. Critics from both left and right argue that such an apology would be trivializing, empty, arrogant and racially divisive. The dominant view, typified by the columnist Charles Krauthammer, is that there is essentially nothing to discuss, since the Civil War closed the issue and the slavers and the enslaved are long since dead. But all the noise suggests the issue is very much alive. The terms of Emancipation are nearly as explosive today as during the 1860's, when they dominated public consciousness and nearly tore the Government apart.

The facts of the period have been papered over in myth. These days, every school child thinks that Abraham Lincoln freed the slaves at one fell swoop -- and for moral reasons. In fact, the Emancipation Proclamation freed only the slaves in rebellious states. Lincoln himself called it a military tactic, acknowledging that moral issues were in no way involved.

The slavers and the enslaved are certainly gone from the scene. But African-American families that have shown even a casual interest in history can give chapter and verse on relatives who were born in slavery or just afterward and the costs they paid. In the Staples family, for example, mine is the first generation to come of age without a flesh and blood former slave somewhere at the extended family table. That people in their 40's have this experience makes the issue a current one indeed.

My maternal great-grandmother, Luella Holmes Patterson, was born of a former slave and her master -- and shipped off the plantation when the wife got wind of her. As a grade schooler, I visited Luella often in Hollins, Va. A few towns away lay the farm of my paternal great-grandfather, John Wesley Staples, who was conceived in slavery as well and born July 4, 1865, at the dawn of Emancipation. He died 10 years before my birth but was remembered to me in stories and pictures. As recently as 10 years ago, he and his wife, Eliza, were the subject of a pamphlet, written for a family reunion.

John Wesley met Emancipation with his whole life still in front of him. But among his neighbors and in-laws were ex-slaves who came to freedom landless and old or simply broken by the experience. My uncle Mack, who will be 80 in December, remembers them well.

When I asked him about the apology brewing in Congress, Uncle Mack could barely contain himself: "They can keep the apology. What good is it? They promised us 40 acres and the mule. None of our people ever got that."

"Forty acres and a mule," of course, is a rallying cry from 1865. It originated during Sherman's March to the Sea. Overwhelmed by black families that abandoned the plantations to follow him, Sherman issued Special Field Order 15, declaring the Georgia Sea Islands and a strip of South Carolina rice country as black settlements. Each family was to get 40 acres and the loan of an Army mule to work it. Other generals and Federal officials followed Sherman's lead, realizing that land was the only hedge against starvation and renewed bondage.

The confiscations were in accordance with Federal law. If sustained and accelerated, the land grants would have created black capital and independence almost immediately and precluded much of the corrosive poverty that still grips the black South. President Andrew Johnson was nearly impeached, in part for obstructing Congress on Reconstruction. Meanwhile, he canceled Special Field Order 15, returning land to white owners and condemning blacks to de facto slavery.

In many places, the eviction process was long and bloody. As the ex-slave Sarah Debro said of the period: "Slavery was a bad thing, and freedom, of the kind we got with nothing to live on, was bad. Two snakes full of poison. One lying with his head pointing north, the other with his head pointing south. . . . Both bit the nigger and they was both bad." My father and uncles grew up steeped in accountings like this one.

For 250 years African-Americans were deprived of freedom, basic education and the right to accumulate wealth, which they could have passed on to their descendants.

This history would have left a wound in any case. But the wound is open and running because the country refused to atone materially when it had the chance. In that sense, at least, my Uncle Mack is right about the apology.

No amount of talk can alter the past.

Declining Minority College Admissions and Enrollments (DRAFT --July 21, 1997)

Question: Are you concerned about reports of declining enrollments of minority students in postsecondary education, such as in California and Texas?

Answer: These trends are disturbing and completely unacceptable. Educational opportunity is the touchstone of the American dream, and these declines raise a serious concern that the doors of college education are being closed to minority students. In addition, diversity in education helps prepare all our students to be productive citizens in the 21st century, so these developments should concern every American.

Question: What is your administration doing to address this problem?

Answer: We are working on several fronts to address this issue:

Support for Affirmative Action and Enforcement of Federal Civil Rights Law

- We will continue to intervene in litigation in support of appropriate affirmative action programs. The Department of Education is looking for a good opportunity to challenge the Hopwood decision, and the Department of Justice has filed a brief challenging California's Proposition 209.
- In response to a complaint, the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has indicated that it will investigate the current admissions policies at the three University of California law schools to determine if they violate federal civil rights law by discriminating against minority students.
- OCR is also conducting a review of the Texas higher education system to ensure that Texas has eliminated all remnants of its former de jure segregated system.

Support for Creative, Race-Neutral Means to Achieve Diversity in Higher Education

- Secretary Riley, Education General Counsel (and now Executive Director for the President's Race Panel) Judy Winston, OCR Director Norma Cantu, and others in the Administration have been pressing higher education officials to maintain and expand diversity, and offering assistance to them to do so. For example, we have called on colleges and universities burdened by new legal restrictions to develop new and creative approaches to achieving diversity, such as aggressively recruiting in secondary schools with high percentages of minority students and forming educational partnerships with such schools.
- We strongly encourage those who share our concerns about these trends to help us make the case for affirmative action and at the same time get involved in state and local efforts in California and Texas to find effective alternative routes to achieve diversity in higher education -- for example, to review and weigh in on the recent draft report of the University of California's Outreach Task Force, and to follow closely the implementation of Texas' new law that guarantees state university admission to the students in the top percentage of every high school's graduating class.

Support for Efforts to Improve K-12 Education in Disadvantaged Communities and to Open the Doors Wide to College

- Through the new, $350 million initiative to recruit and prepare high quality teachers for poor urban and rural areas that the President announced last week, through greater access to technology such as the E-rate, and through other initiatives such as Goals 2000 and increased Title I funds for extra help in basic and advanced skills for disadvantaged students, this Administration has been working hard to raise K-12 achievement for all students and help them prepare for college and high wage jobs.
- The President's proposed budget would open the doors to college through the largest increase in Pell Grants in 25 years, a large increase in work-study funding, and our tax proposal to make the 13th and 14th years of college virtually universal and help people pay for two additional years of college.

Domestic Partnership Benefits for Same-Sex Couples

- I understand that many private sector employers are beginning to offer some type of benefit in this area and that the law that recently took effect in Hawaii provides certain benefits to same-sex couples. I also know that the DNC recently instituted such a policy. And Barney Frank has talked to me about legislation he intends to introduce which would provide these benefits for federal employees.
- I had previously asked Bruce Reed, my domestic policy adviser, to look at these issues and he is doing so while at the same time monitoring the developments in the private sector.
- While I'm sympathetic to many of the concerns raised, I think we will have to monitor for a time how these policies work in practice and take a hard look at what's happening in the private sector and in communities which have instituted such policies.

Two of our friends in the legal immigrant advocacy community (Josh Bernstein of the National Immigration Law Center and Michael Hill of Catholic Charities) called me tonight to:

- 1) Express their dismay over the GOP conferees choosing the House provisions over the Senate provisions. They said some of their allies will likely denounce the move. Apparently an organization of Soviet Jews will be in town Wednesday and Thursday this week.
- 2) They put on our radar screen that if somehow we do not enact a reconciliation bill before the August recess, Congress will need enact a temporary extension of SSI and Medicaid benefits. They said notices will go out September 8th for cut-offs October 1st, so to avoid unnecessary panic among legal immigrants, a temporary extension would need to happen before the August recess or immediately thereafter.

Subject: Needle Exchange Q & A

I am concerned that our current Q & A on needle exchange is obsolete. The question the President is most likely to be asked is as follows:

Q: What does the Administration plan to do about lifting the ban on federal funding of needle exchange programs?

A: We firmly believe that we must do everything possible to address the twin epidemics of HIV and substance abuse. We have overwhelming evidence that needle exchange programs reduce the rate of HIV transmission. However, there is still considerable discussion with regard to their impact on drug use. Until we can make the case that these programs do not encourage drug use our chances are marginal, at best, of averting a negative Congressional backlash. We do not want to find ourselves in a worse position on this issue than where we started. We are continuing to work with Congress, the research community, and AIDS advocacy groups to protect their waiver authority of Secretary Shalala to decide this issue on the basis of public health.

Let me know what you think.
