Since the President's standards initiative is under attack, he needs to make this the focus of his Back to School event on September 8.

Carolyn has an excellent package of information about literacy including state and county data .This can be released the week before : September 3 or 4th. She is going to talk to the VP's office to see if he would be interested in participating .

The President in his September 8 address would reference some of the literacy figures as another example of the importance of / need for national standards.

Thank you for your letter regarding the proposed tobacco settlement.

I appreciate knowing your views on this important issue.

I believe this agreement is an opportunity to build on the progress we have already made in protecting our children from tobacco. I have asked my domestic policy advisor, Bruce Reed, and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Donna Shalala, to review the agreement carefully, to listen to public health experts, and to help me ensure that any agreement that goes forward is in the best interest of the public health, especially the health of our children.

As we review the agreement, I will keep your views in mind, and I hope you will remain involved as we work to create a healthier future for our children.

8/20/97 DRAFT LETTER TO COLLEGE PRESIDENTS

Automated Records Management System
Hex-Dump Conversion

Dear:

The welfare reform law that President Clinton signed into law last year emphasizes work and personal responsibility. One important question that has arisen in some States is whether welfare recipients attending college must drop out to meet the law's work requirements. We are writing to provide information about how welfare recipients can combine employment with education and how States can use the flexibility in the law to use college to prepare recipients for work.

Under the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) welfare program, summarized in the attachment, welfare recipients can meet the work requirements and attend college, if colleges work with State and local officials to provide qualifying work opportunities aligned with the students' academic needs. For example, the Federal Work Study (FWS) Program, administered by the Department of Education, can be used to provide work opportunities to help meet the work requirements under TANF, if consistent with State TANF determinations as to what is work. Federal law does not limit the number of hours that a student can work under the Federal Work Study program, so long as the student's academic and financial need and the college's FWS allocation are taken into account. We encourage States to recognize work study as work under TANF; if they do so, the Federal Government will recognize such work as meeting the work participation requirements, so long as the required number of hours of work are performed.

In addition, we encourage you to explore with appropriate officials at the State and local level other options to accommodate college attendance with the requirements of welfare reform. As described in the attachment, States have the authority to use an array of services and activities, including education and training, to prepare recipients for work and self-sufficiency. A list of State welfare agency administrators is enclosed.

Achieving the Administration's goals of making welfare reform a success and increasing access to college education requires continued cooperative effort from many parties. We look forward to continuing to work with you and State and local officials in this process. Please feel free to call upon us or the following individuals if you have any questions:

Sincerely,

Donna E. Shalala
Secretary of Health and Human Services

Richard W. Riley
Secretary of Education

8/20/97 DRAFT

ATTACHMENT POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION UNDER TANF

The Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program emphasizes work and short-term training leading directly to work rather than longer term education and training. Each year, States must place an increasing percentage of their caseload in work activities that are prescribed in the statute. In Fiscal Year (FY) 1998, beginning October 1, 1998, States must engage 30 percent of all recipients in work rising to 50 percent by FY 2002. In FY 1998, single parents must work 20 hours per week, increasing to 30 hours per week by FY 2000 in order to be counted as "engaged in work" for the calculation of the State's participation rate.

Non-vocational post-secondary education does not count towards a State's participation rate. Vocational educational training, including vocational post-secondary education, is one of the specified activities, but can be counted for no more than 12 months per recipient and for no more than 30 percent of individuals who count towards the State's participation rate. States can count as work unsubsidized or subsidized employment, on-the-job-training, work experience, community service, providing child care services to individuals participating in community service, limited periods of job search, and secondary school for teen parents.

States must require all recipients to work after receiving benefits for 24 months, whether or not consecutive. For the purpose of this requirement, work is defined by the State. Many States are choosing to impose work requirements earlier. Federal funds may not be used to provide assistance to families containing an adult who has received assistance for more than 60 months, and States may impose shorter time limits.

Although some post-secondary activities may not be countable for the State's participation rate, States are not otherwise precluded from spending their TANF dollars on these activities, so long as they promote job preparation, work, and self-sufficiency for needy families or promote one of the other primary goals of the TANF program. At the same time, States receive credit towards the participation rate for caseload reductions not caused by eligibility changes. An effective welfare-to-work program which includes support of post-secondary education, therefore, could help a State achieve the participation rate requirement even if participation in those specific activities are not countable.

In addition, federal law does not preclude States from encouraging recipients to combine their required work activity with additional education. Although it is not easy to raise children, work in a job, and go to school at the same time, many Americans do so each year. Most undergraduate students, whether or not they are raising a child, work while attending college. Almost all part-time students work; over half of full-time students work over 20 hours per week.

Many States are using their flexibility under the welfare law to help welfare recipients combine work and education. For example:

- Florida provides up to two years of supportive services, including child care, to individuals who successfully leave welfare for work and who wish to return to school in order to move to a better job.
- California is increasing work-study positions for welfare recipients and has received an AmeriCorps grant to support service-learning positions for recipients studying early childhood education.

States have great flexibility in designing their TANF programs. The scheduling of work activities and the availability of child care for both work and classes, for example, affect whether taking college classes is a real possibility for recipients. University officials may wish to explore with appropriate officials at the State and local level these and other options to accommodate college attendance with the requirements of welfare reform. Such a dialogue might include, for example, student employment opportunities on campus or other arrangements, such as internships or work cooperatives, that would allow these students to continue their studies, whether full- or part-time. The possibility of redesigning courses and programs to meet the new needs of welfare recipients for intensive, short-term, job-oriented training also merits consideration. States that wish to promote college as an option can also leverage resources from outside the welfare system to support this goal.

TEXT:

I just talked with David Frank of the Education Department and Pat Forgione re the NAEP release, scheduled for 8/28. We agreed that Pat would talk to his board about moving their release to 9:00 am on 8/30, to be followed by the President's radio address. Pat will explain the reason as a way to get more attention for the report; releasing it on Thursday 8/28 would mean the Friday paper of Labor Day weekend -- not a great hit. Waiting until 8/30 increases the chance we can get Sunday coverage -- still Labor Day but Sunday is a lot better and the radio address can really bump it up.

If asked by their press why they are moving to Saturday morning - not their expected release date - they would explain it was an effort to get more attention .

Pat asked how sure we were that this would be the President's topic. I said 95 %-- that given the legislative situaiton, and the fact that this is one of our best opportunities before Congress comes back, this would be a go unless we had some really unexpected event .

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

Automated Records Management System
Hex-Dump Conversion

FROM: Bruce Reed
Mike Cohen

SUBJECT: Congressional Fight over national testing initiative

The National Test initiative faces an extremely serious challenge when Congress resumes and takes up the Labor-HHS-ED appropriations bills, possibly as early as September 2 in the Senate and September 4 in the House. The situation in the House is particularly serious. Our chief supporters on the appropriations subcommittee, Dave Obey and John Porter, are very concerned, and staff to Obey, Goodling and Riggs all believe that Goodling can prevail on the House floor. No one has a firm vote count, and the timing of votes in both the House and Senate is subject to change. At present we are proceeding on the basis of a worst-case scenario, while we continue to gather information that will further shape our strategy and enable us to best calibrate our actions to the magnitude of the situation we face.

Where We Stand

Bill Goodling will offer his amendment to prohibit the use of funds for the development of the test; the amendment has the potential of passing by a large margin. As a result of growing activity from far right groups and home schoolers, mounting criticism from Lynn Cheney and others, and a significant effort on Goodling's part, there is a strong chance that he will carry almost all Republicans. Moderate Republicans who support the testing initiative, including Mike Castle and Frank Riggs, are unlikely to oppose the committee chairman. Republican opposition has apparently been fueled somewhat by the Education Department's award (on Monday) of the contract to develop the tests to a consortium of test publishers. To some, this was seen as another unilateral action by the Administration that demonstrated our unwillingness to recognize a Congressional role in the tests.

In addition, support for the tests is weak in the Black and Hispanic Caucuses. In particular, the Hispanic Caucus has indicated that it is very likely to vote with Goodling unless we agree to their request to test LEP students in reading in Spanish. In addition, some in the Black Caucus are concerned because they believe that the tests will be used primarily to highlight the low performance of Black students without also providing them with needed assistance.

Over the next several days we will work to get a better reading on the level of support for Goodling's amendment, and on the blocks of members on whom we must focus.

While no similar challenge has surfaced in the Senate, we believe it is likely that one will arise once the appropriations bill reaches the floor, and that the same political forces can lead to a defeat for our initiative there as well. We are monitoring the situation in the Senate and will develop specific strategies as appropriate.

Next Steps

Legislative Strategy

While we gather additional information, we are preparing a 2-pronged strategy to strengthen our base of support among Democrats, and to peel off Republican votes. We are focused primarily on the House, as we get a better handle on what we might face in the Senate, a Senate strategy will take shape as well.

Getting Republican Support

We know there are a number of Republicans, including Castle, Riggs and Porter, who support our idea of national tests, and we believe the idea has broader appeal to Republicans. Our basic strategy is to find a compromise that will enable us to keep moving on the development and piloting of the test in the coming year, while giving Congress a larger role in shaping the future of the testing initiative. Our objective will be to separate those Republicans from Goodling and his allies on the far right, since we do not believe it is possible to turn either Goodling or the far right around.

Our first step is to explore with Porter possible options for compromise that will strengthen his hand on the floor. We will also work with him to secure Livingston's support for the floor.

We anticipate several options, including offering legislation to seek specific authorization for the tests, and/or to establish NAGB as an independent governing board -- so long as we can continue to develop the tests over the coming year. Our assumption is that this approach will enable those who support the idea of tests but believe Congress should have a role, to split from Goodling. There are potential downsides to these options. We may fail to enact legislation, or we may delay the initial implementation of the tests for a year while NAGB assumes its role. We think these dangers are worth the gamble-- pushing Congress for an up or down vote on the tests will give you a good vehicle for using the bully pulpit, and for splitting more moderate republicans from the far right.

We will be meeting with Porter's staff on Thursday morning. This may yield a different set of options for us to consider. If appropriate will ask Secretary Riley to follow up with Porter and Livingston. Depending upon where we wind up with them, we may approach Riggs as well.

Securing the Democratic Base [Elena--I want to run this whole section by Andy this morning. He should be able to fill in some details, and he ought to be able to improve on the overall approach.]

There are three basic steps we must take to strengthen and mobilize our support among Democrats.

First, we must make clear to the House Democratic leadership that the standards and testing agenda is your top priority, and that together we must work to keep the support of the Democratic Caucus. [Do we say that Hilley will develop a strategy to address this when he returns next week?]

Automated Records Management System
Hex-Dump Conversion

Second, we must activate and support the allies we know we have, including Obey and others on the appropriations committee, George Miller, Dale Kildee and others on the Education and Economic Opportunities Committee; Tim Romer, Bob Etheridge and others on the Education Task Force, etc.

Third, we must win as much support as possible from the Hispanic and Black caucuses, by addressing their concerns where possible or by persuading them to support us on other grounds.

Hispanic Caucus: As you know, the principal concern of the Hispanic Caucus is that LEP students who are not sufficiently proficient in English be given the opportunity to take a Spanish version of the 4th grade reading test, rather than either being unfairly forced to take a test they are unprepared for, or being excluded from the test altogether. Caucus members believe that unless these students were provided with a Spanish language version of the test, they would be stigmatized by virtue of being treated differently, and the schools would not be held accountable for their performance. In many states and local school districts with large enrollments of LEP students, LEP students are generally excluded from taking tests in English if they have fewer than 3 years of schooling. Title 1 now requires that LEP students who are excluded from tests in English be given the opportunity to take tests in their primary language in order to best demonstrate that they have mastered the subject matter.

We see the 4th grade reading test as measuring the ability of students to read in English (rather than solely measuring reading comprehension skills which may ultimately transfer from one language to another). Under our current policy, LEP students with less than three full years of schooling would be excluded from the 4th grade reading test (unless their parents requested that they take it). In addition, because of the Title 1 requirements as well as similar local and state requirements, LEP students excluded from our test will have the opportunity at some point in the early grades to take a reading comprehension test in their native language.

Over the past several weeks DPC and the Education Department, with the support of the urban school systems participating in the tests, have explored a number of options for addressing the concerns of the Hispanic Caucus without altering our fundamental position on the purpose of the reading test. In addition to simply reiterating our current policy, these options include (1) providing LEP students with reading tests in their native language (either by developing versions of the national test in Spanish or other languages, or by helping local districts select high quality commercially produced Spanish reading tests); (2) testing students in English and in their native language (so that a 4th grade LEP student would take the English test, and could also take a Spanish version of the test to demonstrate reading comprehension skills regardless of language proficiency); and (3) providing LEP students an opportunity to take a reading test in English after the 4th grade, once they have been in school for a full three years.

Secretary Riley had a lengthy and difficult conversation with Rep. Becerra on this issue on Tuesday. Becerra reiterated the views of the Caucus, while Secretary Riley indicated his belief that we should provide the test in English only because we must send students and parents an unambiguous signal about the importance of learning to read in English. The Secretary favors an option that would enable LEP students who are not tested in 4th grade reading to take the reading test at a later time, when they have been in school for a full three years. While there is room for continued discussion with Becerra on this issue, it appears very unlikely that we will be able to keep the support of the Caucus if we hold our current position.

Nonetheless, Secretary Riley believes that we should send an unambiguous signal to LEP students and their parents that students should be expected to learn to read in English, and that we should provide the reading test only in English. We agree.

We also believe we should explore appealing to the Caucus on a broader basis than simply the language of the test, including but not limited to other aspects of our education agenda. In addition, we will explore whether appeals to the Caucus from Secretary Pena and former Secretary Cisneros could be productive.

Black Caucus: [to be filled in after meeting with Andy -- he thinks we can get 16-18 votes from CBC.]

Communications Strategy

There are several events already planned that will provide us with good opportunities to make our case to the public. These are:

- Secretary Riley and Bill Goodling will discuss this issue on Face the Nation this Sunday
- An event for the Vice President the week of Aug 25, including possibly a meeting with some of the high-tech business leaders who endorsed the tests in April.
- August 30th Radio Address, in which you will announce the findings from a report on NAEP long-term trends. The report shows that we have made some progress but not nearly enough, and you will be able to use these findings to make the case that national standards and tests are critical for continued improvement.
- We have held Sept. 8 for a test-related event. As we get closer we will be better able to determine the most appropriate event for the day.

It may be helpful for you to take additional steps while on vacation that would reinforce our message. For example, it might be a good idea for you to make a brief statement to the press on Sunday, after the Riley/Goodling appearance on Face the Nation, to demonstrate your personal commitment to the success of the testing initiative, and to take on any of Goodling's points that may warrant additional response.

Outreach Strategy

Automated Records Management System
Hex-Dump Conversion

DPC and the Education Department have been working with our core supporters in the education and business community. The Council of Great City Schools, AFT, NEA, and CCSSO, together with BRT and NAB, have already been contacting moderate Republicans (business groups), urban Democrats, and the House leadership. In addition, they are working on a joint statement of support from others in education community, including local school boards and elementary school principals.

We are planning a number of additional steps, including:

- Mobilizing the High-Tech Business Leaders who have endorsed the test. John Doerr has contacted us, offering to help. We will explore with him a number of possible steps, including asking them to (1) place a full page add in support of the tests in the Post, Times or Wall Street Journal; (2) have prominent Republicans among the CEO's to privately approach the Speaker (3) have all of the business leaders contact key members.
- Mobilizing CEO's in the main business groups in support of our agenda. While the national organizations have been working with us, it is important for a number of well respected CEO's to personally take on a more active role. It may be helpful for you to personally call a number of them (e.g., Lou Gerstner, John Pepper, Joe Gorman, Frank Schrantz [Elena--this list of names may change somewhat in the final version]) in order to secure their active support.
- Mobilize Mayors and Governors, especially where we can productively connect supportive mayors and governors with key members of Congress
- Meet with Black and Hispanic Groups, such as the NAACP and Urban League to discuss the tests. These meetings will be an opportunity to continue to respond to concerns in the minority community. While we may not be able to win any converts through this process, we may at least be able to diminish the intensity of their opposition.

Cynthia Rice
Daily Report -- 8/21/97

Legal Immigrants and Food Stamps -- Today, five advocacy groups held a press conference in the Senate Russell building to call upon Congress and the Administration to restore food stamps to legal immigrants. As we noted in our weekly report last week, about 900,000 legal immigrants will lose food stamps this month, because the welfare law required states to drop legal immigrants from the rolls within a year after enactment. At today's press conference, the National Council of La Raza, the U.S. Catholic Conference, and other groups praised us for restoring disability and health benefits to legal immigrants in the budget, but said the "anniversary of welfare reform act is no cause for celebration" because of the food stamp cuts.

In preparation for the new food stamp rules, the Department of Agriculture has undertaken an extensive outreach campaign to inform legal immigrants of the 14 other nutrition programs for which they are still eligible (including WIC, School Lunch and Breakfast, Child and Adult Care Food Program, Nutrition Assistance Program for the Elderly, and the Emergency Food Assistance Program). This outreach campaign includes publishing an informational op-ed in Spanish language and other speciality newspapers, releasing an issue brief to the media, advocacy groups, and state and local government officials, and providing Hispanic radio stations with taped informational announcements. In addition, as we noted in last week's report, Congress is urging recently enacted legislation allowing USDA to sell food stamps to states for distribution to legal immigrants and other individuals made ineligible by the welfare law. Washington State, Massachusetts, and New York already have signed up for this option and other states have expressed interest. An additional six states (CO, FL, MD, MN, NE, RI) are using state funds to provide nutritional assistance to legal immigrants in other ways.

Sarah,
Is this OK as a response to the many letters regarding children's health insurance? Let me know if you have any changes. Thanks.

Thank you for your letter regarding health insurance for uninsured children.

As you know, the balanced budget I signed on August 6, 1997, included the largest investment in health care for children since the passage of Medicaid in 1965. An unprecedented $24 billion will go toward children's health care, guaranteeing meaningful health coverage for as many as five million uninsured children.

As we work to create a healthier nation for our children, I appreciate your support and I hope you will remain involved.

TEXT:

I wanted to let you know where the DoJ proposal on exposure to violence is.

I have worked with Sarah Ingersoll on a joint letter from you and Shay Bilchek inviting folks from various agencies (principally DoJ, HHS, DOE, DOD) to an exploratory meeting we discussed, to take place sometime in September. I've toned down the letter significantly and parred back the invitees (Sarah had invited someone from every agency, it seemed). Sarah will fax it back to Laura's attention tomorrow for your review. Please feel free to tone the language or participants down further, as you wish. Once you've approved it, Laura can select an appropriate time for the meeting in mid-late September. Sarah will take on all the administrative burdens of faxing the memo and getting RSVPs in early September. Laura, please leave Elena's edits for me and I'll relay them and the time/date to DOJ when I return from vacation.

Elena, on another note, I have been beating my head against the HHS brick wall trying to get information about the recent report on Foster Care for the past week or so, for the First Lady. I have the report, but need to get more information about the group -- I understand that the organization that conducted the study leans way-right and favors privatized foster care, but I want more information before I send it on. I'll have it done before the Clintons return.

I'll be back September 2nd.

Nicole

TEXT:

Attached is a memo from Erskine to the strategy team. The purpose of this e-mail is to do the following:

further explain Erskine's request for a separate memo on prioritizing the pillars;
try to frame this modifying-your-pillars process;
inform you of deadlines and drop-offs;
provide the modified table of contents (or "table of pillars" which is attached); and provide the memo, in case you have not seen it yet (attached).

First off, apologies for the lousy timing of this whole project. The first round with the 48-hour deadline was difficult, and this round, while not as time sensitive, is just as vexing with so many people on vacation. However, this round should afford some time for groups to work together.

Separate Memo on Prioritizing the Pillars

The third paragraph of EBB's memo requests that each member of the strategy team individually rank the pillars in order of perceived importance and briefly describe the reasoning behind their prioritization. This request is for the core members of the strategy team to spend some time individually thinking about their recommended vision for the next three and one half years. It should stimulate some creative and thoughtful ideas for moving forward. These memos will go directly to Sylvia and Erskine. I do not think that these memos will be circulated among the group, but I will follow up on this point later.

Modifying Your Pillars

In modifying your pillars, please pay attention to the third paragraph regarding timing, prioritizing and costs. While this process may seem not exactly clear (understatement), I think it is useful keep in mind the goal: On September 2, we must provide paper to the President which clearly and succinctly provides the pillars and the choices within them and among them. Therefore, in modifying your pillar ask yourself 'How do I accomplish this with my pillar?' That is, can the President see that my pillar is prioritized? Is the time for initiating and/or completing a particular building block clear? Can he see that the cost is already in the budget or that it requires new spending or reprioritization of budget funding? etc.

Deadlines & Details

As the memo states, the deadline for pillars and memos is Tuesday, August 26. Please forward 25 copies of your pillar to me in room 164 OEOB. Please make the deadline, as it will greatly help the Wednesday's meeting generally (and your pillar specifically) if the participants have the afternoon and evening to review the materials. Due to the tight deadlines of last meeting, we were not able to distribute the pillars before the first meeting and some of the meeting time was eaten up by the group reading and deciphering pillars. With vacation schedules, I realize this will be difficult too.

Modified Table of Contents

The table of contents (attached) was modified by adding campaign finance reform and merging "Renewal of Families" and "Children."

Thank you.

Possible GPO Reports To Access from Dept. Of Education:

1. [HEHS

-94

-169BR] Early Childhood Programs: Many Poor Children and Strained Resources Challenge Head Start

SUMMARY:The number of children under age five who are at risk of school failure increased greatly during the 1980s. Education reform and the reauthorization of Head Start-

-the centerpiece of federal early childhood programs-

-have focused attention on improving the quality of early childhood programs and increasing the number of children being served. This report highlights the major themes and policy implications for implementing Head Start and other early childhood programs. GAO concludes that efforts to improve the quality of the Head Start program and expand it to include more children are complicated by several factors: the growing numbers and changing characteristics of poor children, rising costs of services, and limited community resources.

2. [HRD

-94

-21] School

-Linked Human Services: A Comprehensive Strategy for Aiding

Students at Risk of School Failure

SUMMARY: Since 1980, at least 8 states and more than 200 localities have been delivering a variety of health, social, and educational services to students-

-many of whom are at risk of failing in school or dropping out. These comprehensive school

-linked programs are trying to improve the academic performance and well

-being of at

-risk students by addressing their many needs in a coordinated manner at schools. Some policymakers view these programs as an efficient, cost

-effective way to link at

-risk children and their families with prevention and early intervention services. This report (1) reviews the literature to determine the kinds of school

-linked approaches involving students and their families, the relative strengths and weaknesses of these approaches, and the circumstances under which each appears most appropriate; (2) identifies the problems encountered when using the school as a hub for delivering services; and (3) determines the role that the federal government could play in promoting promising school

-linked approaches.

3. [HEHS

-95

-4FS] Early Childhood Programs: Multiple Programs and Overlapping Target

Groups

SUMMARY: This report responds to a congressional request for information on early childhood programs-

-that is, preschool and child care programs for children from birth through age five. In summary, GAO found that in fiscal years 1992 and 1993, the federal government funded more than 90 early childhood programs in 11 federal agencies and 20 offices. Of these programs, 34 were key programs-

 -early childhood programs for which early childhood education or child care is the key to the program's mission. These key programs delivered services to at least two million children below age five and spent at least $3.66 billion in fiscal year 1992. However, data are limited on the exact number of children served and the dollars spent on children below age five. Although these programs have some similarities, they may target different populations, use different eligibility criteria, and provide a different mix of services to children and their families.

4. [HEHS

-21] Early Childhood Centers: Services to Prepare Children for School Often

Limited

SUMMARY:More than a third-

-2.8 million-

-of the nation's children aged three and four were from poor families in 1990, a growth of 17 percent since 1980. This trend continues. These disadvantaged youngster often live in homes that provide little intellectual stimulation, as well as inadequate health care and nutrition. Lagging behind their middle- and upper

-income peers when they enter school, many disadvantaged children never catch up. Early childhood centers funded by federal and state government prepare children from school and help them to overcome their disadvantages. This report answers the following questions: What services do disadvantaged children need to be prepared for school? To what extent do these children receive these services from early childhood centers? If disadvantaged children do not receive these services from early childhood centers, why not?
