Final 1/6/99
Paul Glastris

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON
REMARKS ON AFTER SCHOOL
EAST ROOM, THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON, DC
Thursday, January 7, 1999

Our Founding Fathers believed that American democracy could survive only if its citizens were well-educated. In 1787 they declared that all new territories set aside land for public schools, thereby establishing the principle that public education, though a state and local responsibility, is a national priority. In 1867, the federal government created the land grant college system. In 1917, federal aid for vocational training began flowing to public high schools. In 1944, the GI bill gave millions of returning veterans tickets to the middle class. In 1958, the launch of Sputnik led to federal funds to improve science and math instruction in public schools. In 1965, federal support for education expanded further to bring minorities long shut out of the classroom inside.

At each of these turning points in history, America strengthened public education to match the challenges of the times. Today, America faces another great challenge: The emergence of a global economy that is fast-paced, technologically sophisticated, and driven by information. An economy in which the workplace is no longer just for men and the work day is no longer bound by the hours of nine-to-five. An economy in which, more than ever before, what you earn depends on what you learn.

To meet the challenge of the new economy and help our people compete, our public schools must change, and change dramatically. They must reflect the way we work and live now, on the threshold of the 21st Century. They must provide every child in America a world-class education. Today, I want to talk about the progress we have already made towards meeting these goals, and another crucial step we must take.

In the last six years, we have made progress. Forty-eight of 50 states have now adopted the tougher academic standards we called for in our Goals 2000 program back in 1994. Thousands of schools have cracked down on guns, gangs, violence and discipline problems, and the percentage of students who report being threatened or injured at school nationwide is down.

We have begun to organize an army of tutors to help elementary school children learn to read and middle and high school students prepare for college. We have increased investment in early childhood learning through Head Start. We are making progress towards connecting every school and library in America to the Internet by the year 2000. Last fall, we fought for and won from Congress a down payment on 100,000 new, highly-trained teachers to reduce class sizes in the early grades. I trust that the new Congress will keep up those payments, and I hope they will work with me to build or modernize 5000 schools.

All these efforts and more are beginning to show results. SAT scores are up. Math scores have risen in nearly all grades nationwide. This is good news. We should be pleased. We should be thankful. But we should not be fooled into complacency. Reading scores have hardly budged and many of our foreign competitors are improving their educational systems faster than we are.

Nor have the majority of our schools kept pace with new patterns of work and family life. A new economy bringing our nation unparalleled prosperity is also drawing more and more parents into the workforce. On any given day in America, as many as 15 million school-aged children are left to fend for themselves at home, idle in front of the television or out on the streets exposed to gangs and drugs and crime. On any given day, when schools let out, juvenile crime soars, as does the number of children victimized by crime. On any given day, when school lets out, tens of millions of working parents look nervously at the clock, hoping and praying that their children will be safe.

It is no secret that I believe that the best way for our nation to meet these challenges is to expand the number and quality of after school programs. With quality after school, working parents have the tool they need to succeed at work and as parents. Students learn their lessons in the schoolhouse, not on the street. Youth crime and victimization plummet. Quality after school programs enhance opportunity, bolster responsibility, and strengthen communities. They honor our values and benefit our nation.

That is why I have supported grants for quality after school programs through the 21st Century Community Learning Center Initiative, first introduced by Sen. Jeffords and championed by Senators Boxer and Kennedy, and Congresswoman Lowey. This crucial effort has grown from $1 million two years ago to $40 million last year to $200 million in the budget I signed last fall. Yet the demand for quality after school, the bipartisan support it has gained, and its potential to transform public education in America, far outweigh the investment we have made so far.

We must do more. Today, I am pleased to announce that the new balanced budget I will submit to Congress next month triples our investment in academically-enriched after school programs. This new investment will give over a million school children all across America somewhere to go other than the streets when school lets out--a place where they can play, study, explore the Internet, and be safe. It will give millions of working parents peace of mind as they fight the traffic home at night. It will make the streets safer for all Americans.

In addition to adapting public schools to the new patterns of work and life in America, we must also provide our children--all our children--with the world-class educations they will need to prosper in the new economy. For that to occur, we must have a revolution of rising expectations and greater accountability in our schools. Quality after school is a key to that revolution.

I have seen the revolution with my own eyes in the many visits the First Lady and I have made to schools in Chicago. Mayor Richard Daley has made many changes, the most crucial of which was ending the practice of social promotion, in which students proceed to the next grade level regardless of whether they have mastered the material in their current grade level.

In Chicago, students who fail tests at the end of 3rd, 6th, and 8th grades are placed in academically-enhanced summer school and after school programs and tutored until they do pass--and most students eventually do. Chicago's Lighthouse after school program keeps 112,000 children in 248 Chicago schools off the street and in the classroom, while its summer school program is now the sixth largest school district in America. Citywide math and reading scores have gone up three years in a row in Chicago, with the biggest gains coming from some of the most disadvantaged schools.

Now other cities such as the District of Columbia, and states such as Delaware and South Carolina, are also ending social promotion and offering after school and other help to students who need it. We should encourage more communities follow their lead. That is why, in the competition for these new after school grants, I want priority to be given to those communities that end social promotion.

Today, Education Week published a survey showing that in high schools that require students to pass an exit exam before graduating, 68 percent of students say the tests "make them work harder." Think about that. Sixty eight percent. That means that over two-thirds of these students, by their own admission, were not doing their best, until adults had the courage to challenge them and hold them accountable. Now imagine what would happen if we started holding all public school students in America accountable.

A quality after school program cannot be a substitute for a poor quality program during the regular school day. We will make sure that these investments go to schools that end social promotion the right way. We must insist on more accountability not just from students but from parents, teachers, principals, school superintendents, and elected officials. We must have more high-quality child care so that all children are ready to learn on the first day of kindergarten. I will be talking about all this and more in my State of the Union address. But today, by raising our investment in quality after school, we are taking a crucial step towards transforming our public schools so that every child in America has a world-class education for the 21st Century.

Thank you and God bless you.

Maria (Echaveste) will hold a meeting TODAY at 6:30 p.m. in her office to review Presidential initiatives and budget items that relate to efforts of the President's Initiative on Race and how we should discuss/highlight those issues in the State of the Union and budget roll outs.

The meeting will cover:

- 1) the substance of those budget items;
- 2) products needed to discuss them; and
- 3) outreach on the items --- who, when, where and how.

We need to be prepared to discuss these race-related initiatives, themes and budget items as we undertake SOTU briefings next week with Members, elected officials and constituents. If you cannot attend this meeting, please be sure to send a representative from your office.

Elena,

I am forwarding you an e-mail that edley forwarded to me re: possible plans to include a overview discussion of civil rights and race initiatives in the analytical perspectives section of the budget. According to Edley's e-mail, Maria is having a meeting this afternoon (6:30) to discuss some of this.

Subject: Re: Budget Analytical Perspectives Chapter on Civil Rights

This is clearly a Maria decision.

I'd like this story produced at some point, did not realize it was really a possibility to get it done for the budget. From my perspective, it would be fabulous to try. Would presumably just KILL any claims that POTUS has dropped this from the radar screen, etc. Would also give me some useful material for the President's book, which will have an "accomplishments" chapter.

She has a 6:30 meeting on rollout/communications in relation to race initiative-related matters in the budget and SOTU. So maybe Josh can get her to make a decision there. I'm not planning to attend, cuz I'm trying to write.

To be concrete: I would favor the elaborate alternative, and failing that, just the enforcement numbers. I don't think the crosscut standing relatively naked would be a plus.

By copy of this I'm suggesting that Julie Fernandes of DPC weigh in, and

Clara
Shin of Maria's office.

TO: Thurgood Marshall, Jr.

FROM: John Gomperts

DATE: January 6, 1999

REQUEST: President Clinton's participation in kick-off of AmeriCorps' "Call to Service" recruitment campaign.

PURPOSE: To celebrate the success of the President's national service program by focusing national attention on AmeriCorps passing its 100,000 member milestone and to kick-off "Call to Service" - a national recruitment campaign designed to ensure AmeriCorps reaches its' 200,000 member mark by the end of 2000.

BACKGROUND: President Clinton created AmeriCorps, the domestic Peace Corps, in 1993. Since then, more than 100,000 Americans have participated in AmeriCorps - a tremendous achievement for the President and for the national service movement. (N.B. It took the Peace Corps more than two decades to reach the 100,000-member mark.)

To call attention to the success of AmeriCorps and to enhance our recruiting efforts, we are launching a "Call to Service" - a national recruitment drive to ensure AmeriCorps reaches 200,000 members by the end of 2000. This campaign includes a new television PSA produced by MTV, print advertising, a direct mail appeal to college seniors by former AmeriCorps members, as well as a number of campus-based and other recruiting events throughout the spring and summer.

For the February kick-off event, the President could swear in 100 AmeriCorps members who are serving locally as well as several members from the first AmeriCorps class to represent the more than 100,000 who have served since 1994. The event would also include the unveiling of the new MTV AmeriCorps PSA.

PREVIOUS PARTICIPATION: Since his 1992 campaign, the President has participated in number of high-profile AmeriCorps and national service events including the bill signing and the original AmeriCorps launch. Most recently the President served with AmeriCorps members on the Martin Luther King Day of Service in January 1998 and spoke to the City Year AmeriCorps Convention on Idealism in Cleveland in June 1998. He was scheduled to participate in an event marking AmeriCorps' 100,000th member on October 23, 1998, which was canceled due to the signing of the Wye Plantation Peace Accord.

DATE/TIME: Week of February 8, 1999

DURATION: One to one and a half-hours

LOCATION: Our recommended site is Georgetown University, the President's alma mater and site of one of his "new covenant" speeches in which he spoke eloquently about the ethic of service. A college campus with an audience of young people is a excellent setting for the President to deliver a "call to service" campaign asking young people to give a year of service to their country. Alternatively, the event could be held in East Room as originally planned. The White House venue has the advantage of being convenient, but is less appropriate for our recruitment message.

PARTICIPANTS: The President, Harris Wofford, selected Members of Congress, Administration officials including especially Mark Gearan, current and past AmeriCorps members.

REMARKS REQUIRED: Yes. Major speech on national service, in the vein of the President's campaign speech at Notre Dame in September 1992, his speech at Rutgers unveiling the plan for AmeriCorps in 1993, and his speech at the City Year/AmeriCorps conference in Cleveland in June 1997. Also lead the AmeriCorps members, and others, in reciting the AmeriCorps pledge, as he did in Cleveland.

MEDIA COVERAGE: National media. Regional possibilities depending on involvement of AmeriCorps members. Also, possibilities for strong focus on college press.

PROPOSED ATTENDANCE: If at Georgetown University, a large student audience, and leaders of the non-profit community. If at the White House, AmeriCorps members and the leadership of major non-profit organizations.

RECOMMENDED BY: Harris Wofford

John asked me to see if you would prepare a brief update memo for the President. Please let me know what your timing will be on getting it in to the President.

Also, the President asked John which two states had not adopted academic standards. Can you e-mail which ones so I can let John know? Thanks a lot.

1. Benefits restoration for immigrants could be a leak.

2. 100,000 Native American Teachers could be a leak (though Mary says it may be part of the SOTU).

3. According to Ceci Rouse, NEC is looking to do an event around the larger literacy initiative sometime between the SOTU and the budget release. The ESL/Civics component (now at $70 million) should be a part of that.

Food Safety - Food Additives. The Food and Drug Administration announced this week that it will expedite review of petitions for food additives that could cut the risk of foodborne illness caused by dangerous contaminants such as Salmonella and Cyclospora. Currently, the food additive petitions are considered in the order in which they are received and can take years to be approved. The FDA estimates that of the hundreds of food-additive applications now pending, only a few are designed to improve food safety. Foodborne illnesses cause an estimated 9,000 deaths and 33 million illnesses in the United States each year. The announcement was described in a short article in Wednesday's Wall Street Journal.

TEXT:

One of our many friends out in the real world sent along this quote from Robert Kennedy in April 1968 as an idea for POTUS talking about ending the politics of destruction in SOU. It also fits well with a 'One America' theme.

"When you teach a man to hate and fear his brother, when you teach that he is a lesser man because of his color or his beliefs or the policies he pursues, when you teach that those who differ from you threaten your freedom or your job or your family, then you also learn to confront others not as fellow citizens but as enemies, to be met not with cooperation but with conquest; to be subjugated and mastered....We learn, at the last, to look to our brothers as aliens...We learn to share only a common fear, only a common desire to retreat from each other, only a common impulse to meet disagreement with force...We must admit in ourselves that our children's future cannot be built on the misfortunes of others...But we can perhaps remember, if only for a time, that those who live with us are our brothers, that they share with us the same short moment of life; that they seek, as do we, nothing but the chance to live their lives in purpose and in happiness, winning what satisfaction they can....Surely we can learn, at the least, to look at those around us as fellow men, surely we can begin to work a little harder to bind up the wounds among us and to become in our hearts brothers and countrymen once again."

A correction from the 6:30 meeting: you should have received a copy of the "Building One Nation" chapter in a package from Staff Secretary yesterday. Apologies for the confusion; I thought it was still in the OMB editing process. Comments are due by 4 tomorrow. If you did not receive a copy, please call me at 55733 and I will get you one.
