Fund To Help Tobacco Farmers

By ESTES THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) -- The nation's four largest cigarette companies agreed today to set up a $5.15 billion trust fund to help tobacco growers who face a shrinking market due to settlements of lawsuits that have sharply raised the price of smoking and stepped up anti-smoking initiatives.

The agreement climaxed two days of private meetings between company officials and representatives from 11 tobacco states. For a time, it appeared the trust fund was in jeopardy because R.J. Reynolds balked at participating. The company said a better way to help the farmers would be to buy more of their tobacco.

But during negotiations today, R.J. Reynolds relented and signed onto the trust fund, which was restructured. Previously, the four companies -- R.J. Reynolds, Philip Morris, Brown & Williamson and Lorillard -- would have paid into the fund over 10 years; the agreement extends that to 12 years.

``There are many, many details yet to be worked out,`` said Phil Carlton, the lawyer representing the tobacco companies. ``One of the concerns was one of the companies in particular had a problem with paying the money out that would have been its share in the first couple of years.``

Tobacco farmers have been worried about their future as the drive against smoking intensified.

Costly settlements of state claims against tobacco companies seeking reimbursement for the cost of treating sick smokers have sharply raised the price of cigarettes and that is expected to reduce demand.

The trust fund initially was proposed by Philip Morris after the major cigarette makers agreed to a $206 billion settlement with 46 states over health care costs last November. Part of that agreement required the companies to meet with state officials to discuss the trust fund for farmers.

Philip Morris announced last week it would deposit $300 million into the fund this year, even if other companies chose not to participate. But the No. 1 tobacco company said its future participation hinged on the other companies joining the fund.

During the fund's first year, the companies would put in $380 million, with Philip Morris' $300 million contribution making up the bulk of the payment.

The second year, the companies would deposit $280 million; the third year, $400 million; years four-10, $500 million a year; the 11th year, $440 million; and the 12th year, $150 million, the officials said.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said each state will receive a share of the fund equal to the amount of tobacco it grows.

States participating in the discussions are North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

Hunt said the directors of the trust will determine the amount of the payments and when they are disbursed.

"We all leave here today winners with a positive outlook for a measure of financial assistance for our tobacco farmers," Hunt said.

During discussions Wednesday, R.J. Reynolds' senior vice president, Tommy Payne, said his company had concerns about how the trust fund money would be spent and whether it might raise antitrust issues. He said Reynolds' plan to buy more tobacco would not pose such problems because antitrust laws "do not preclude companies from coming to independent decisions."

Others, however, dismissed Reynolds' concerns and questioned whether they were the real reason for the company's reluctance to sign onto the fund.

Bruce may want to add a line about what Gov. Hunt said to him for the weekly item.

Tobacco Farmers.

The four largest cigarette companies agreed Thursday to set up a $5.15 billion trust fund to help tobacco growers who face a shrinking market due to the state settlements that raised the price of smoking and is expected to reduce demand. The companies had agreed to meet with state officials to discuss the trust fund for farmers as part of the $206 billion state settlement last November. There are many details still to be worked out, but it was announced the funds would be distributed over 12 years. During the fund's first year, the companies would put in $380 million, (Philip Morris has already contributed $300 million, the bulk of the payment). The second year, the companies would deposit $280 million; the third year, $400 million; years four-10, $500 million a year; the 11th year, $440 million; and the 12th year, $150 million. Gov. Hunt, who helped spearhead the effort, said each state will receive a share of the fund equal to the amount of tobacco it grows. The eleven participating states are North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia. News stories quoted Governor Hunt as stating: ``We all leave here today winners with a positive outlook for a measure of financial assistance for our tobacco farmers.'` Bruce Reed spoke with the Washington Post congratulating Governor Hunt and other state leaders for this positive step and reaffirming the Administration's commitment to protecting tobacco farmers and their communities. USDA will issue a similar statement. We have also spoken with leaders of some of the leading tobacco farmer organizations to explain recent Administration proposals and our continued commitment. The farm groups have expressed concern that a federal suit and new federal tax will further decrease demand for tobacco, but privately acknowledge that the threat of further federal action has thus far probably aided their efforts in negotiating the $5 billion trust fund.

Of course, DPC insists it will be done the right way, like Chicago does.

But

look at the Chicago practice as described below. This is bad for kids of color and that's why it is so important for those discussions with the Leadership Conference to be undertaken in good faith. (The meeting Bruce and Mike had was,

I understand, terrific, but didn't cover the issue of social promotions.)

Finally, I respectfully request a copy of whatever has been given to POTUS describing the evidence on the Chicago experience, and characterizing the state social science evidence, rather than anecdote.

Thanks.

> "Social promotion kills an educational system," he said.
> "When we came in, 9,700 of the previous year's 27,000

Subject: Worker Re-Training event site ideas

Listed below are the potential sites for next Wednesday's worker re-training event. Please take a look and have these sites vetted through NEC, DPC and Dept. of Ed. Also, let me know which of these sites (two or three) are peoples favorites on paper. An advance person will be looking at the top candidates tomorrow.

1. University of the District of Columbia, Skills Development Institute, Adult Education

UDC is the official state /adult education office for DC. It just took over these responsibilities this year to help turn the programs around. They have a Skills Development Institute for adult learners. The SDI lab has computers, occupational training courses, adult basic education and GED prep courses. POTUS could tour the Skills Development Center and then make remarks.

2. Martin Luther King Library - - DC State Literacy Resource Center (9011 G St., NW)

Literacy Resource Center classes offered, GED prep etc... a YWCA (located next door) also has literacy programs for women and they work w/ MLK library on programs/events. MLK library is hosting a DC Family/Worker Literacy Conference on Feb. 25.

3. Academy of Hope (1501 Columbia Rd, NW)

Excellent service provider organization - adult education courses day and night for levels of learning. Computer assisted training. This is where Miss America Tara Holland launched her literacy platform and program

4. DC Link & Learn (401 M St. SW)

Computer and information technology training center. Parent company is the Foundation for Educational Innovation which seeks to implement strategies for creating and sustaining skilled technical manpower across America's rural and urban communities. Center is open for everyone and has programs in many high-tech computer skills. It has partnerships with Roosevelt High School, Garfield Terrace Public Housing Complex, Shiloh Family Life Center, Woodson High School and Ballou High School. Many corporate sponsors to this program such as: Microsoft, Nationsbank, Freddie Mac, Bay Networks etc..... Sounds like a great place and Jay Dunn has much more detailed info.

given that Minyon and Bob are OK with African American father, and that our African American small business owner is out-of-pocket in Arizona today, we're proposing to go w/ the following line up (order and length of each remarks needs to be determined):

- Governor (Ridge, Carper, Carnehan or O'Bannon)
- County Commissioner (McLaughlin from Hennepin County, Minneapolis)
- Robert Higgins, President of Fleet Bank (will bring a diverse group of 3 women who have moved from welfare to work in his company -- can acknowledge in his or POTUS remarks, sit on stage or in audience)
- Father (either Af Am or Hispanic from either LA, Wisconsin, Colorado or Chicago. Minneapolis is a long shot. may have White just in case since people are hunting now)
- POTUS

We'll keep trying to locate Sam Bishop, the Af American businessman, just in case, and we could always invite and acknowledge him as an example of a small, high tech business that is hiring welfare recipients

DOJ Lawsuit: The Coming Federal Settlement. Search For Closure Continues.

Gary Black (212) 756-4197

Jon Rooney (212) 756-4504

January 21, 1999

"You feed one rat, and six more rats come out of the sewer." A tobacco company

CEO to this analyst

HIGHLIGHTS

1. Once the appeals are exhausted and reality sets in, we believe the industry will agree to a $150 billion-$200 billion settlement with the federal government for smoking-related claims, where the industry would get credits for claims paid out on personal injuries. This plan, pitched for months by Dick Scruggs, would give the industry the closure envisioned by framers of the June 20 accord.
2. Unlike many of our peers, we have always believed that the Medical Recovery Act of 1962 (MCRA) gives the federal government the statutory authority to sue the industry for direct recovery of smoking-related injuries. Absent a settlement, however, we believe the Justice Department's efforts to recover funds from the tobacco industry will fail at trial:

Federal government's lawsuit would have to be brought in federal rather than state court, which have tended to favor the industry.

Unlike the states, the federal government can't claim ignorance about the dangers of tobacco, given federally-mandated warning labels since 1966, Surgeon General's reports since 1964, and the government's own research into the dangers of smoking since the 1950s.

Unlike the states, where the trade pays the excise tax, the industry has paid the federal government trillions in excise taxes since the 1880s.

3. Our Washington sources say that DOJ is 6 -12 months away from bringing its claim. DOJ's first action will be to ask Congress to pass legislation that clarifies the current statutory authority that permits claims for third party recovery of Medicare claims without triggering the dollar-for-dollar offset provision found in Section 10 of the new AG settlement. Republicans are unlikely to object.
4. Moreover, Republicans are likely to support DOJ's efforts to bring a federal recovery claim, since it eliminates the need to pass the $.55/pack excise tax increase proposed by Clinton, and lends support to new legislation being introduced by Rep. Bilirakis (R-FL) and Senator Hutchison (R-TX) to block the federal government from taking its average 60% share of the state settlement proceeds. Yesterday, House Budget Committee Chair Kasich warned Clinton that any proposal to raise cigarette taxes was "dead on arrival."
5. The biggest obstacle to a new settlement with the federal government that gives the industry credits for personal injury claims is again the renegade issue. The AG settlement gave the renegades a $.45/pack cost advantage vs. the majors. A $150-$200 billion settlement with the federal government would give the renegades an additional $.35-$.40/pack cost advantage. Brooke Group's LeBow has been cooperating with DOJ on its criminal investigation for two years, and is likely to be excluded from a civil action.
6. We believe RJR management would cite the threat of a federal recovery action as a reason to hold off on the Nabisco spinoff. We believe an Icahn-led slate would push for the spinoff despite the likely legal challenges. We find no evidence in the history of corporate America of any company that is both solvent and without judgments being blocked from spinning off assets. Last week, The Treasury announced it is considering doing away with some of the tax-free aspects of corporate spinoffs in its F2000 budget.

INVESTMENT CONCLUSIONS

We rate Philip Morris, RJR, and UST outperform. We expect tobacco stocks to remain weak near-term, although we expect a bounce following yesterday's overreaction. Our continued near-term caution is based on the uncertainty associated with four separate trials underway during February (Henley in California; Engle Phase I in Florida; Newcombe/Karney in Memphis; Ohio Iron Workers in Ohio). We see a possible silver lining in the DOJ announcement, since it may alter the conventional wisdom by many in the industry who thought the AG settlement would, by itself, lead to multiple expansion, and hence, higher valuations. Our view remains that in the absence of spinoffs and other restructuring actions, settling simply invites more lawsuits -- which seems to be happening.

ADDITIONAL DETAILS

1. Federal government's authority to bring a claim does not guarantee success.. Unlike many of our peers, we believe that the Medical Cost Recovery Act of 1962 (42 USC § 2651), or MCRA, provides the federal government with the right to pursue either a direct or a subrogated action against the tobacco industry for medical expenses incurred by the federal government for smoking related illnesses. As with the state's Medicaid suits, if the state has a direct or independent cause of action, the industry could not use the defenses of contributory negligence or assumption of risk by individual smokers. The industry, could however, argue that the federal government itself was contributorily negligent based on the government's own awareness of the dangers of tobacco.

The relevant part of the MCRA statute reads:

(a) ...In any case in which the United States is authorized or required by law to furnish hospital, medical, surgical, or dental care and treatment to a person who is injured or suffers a disease, ...under circumstances creating a tort liability upon some third person, ...the United States shall have a right to recover from said third person the reasonable value of the care and treatment...and shall, as to this right, be subrogated to any right or claim that the injured or diseased person ...has against such third person to the extent of the reasonable value of the care and treatment...

(b) The United States may, to enforce such right, (1) intervene or join in any action...brought by the injured or diseased person... against the third person who is liable for the injury or disease; or (2) if such action...is not commenced within six months after the first day in which care and treatment is furnished by the United States in connection with the injury or disease involved, institute and prosecute legal proceedings against the third person who is liable for the injury or disease, in a State or Federal court, either alone...or in conjunction with the injured or diseased person....

This statute provides three ways for the government to recover the costs of medical and hospital care: (1) by subrogation; (2) by intervening or joining in any action brought by the injured person;

(3) by instituting such action itself or in conjunction with the injured or diseased person.¹ Title 42 USC § 2651 creates an independent federal cause of action, and certain defenses are therefore not available.² If the federal government pursues an independent right of action under § 2651, then federal law applies. The United States can pursue an independent cause of action even if the injured person has already filed his own action.³

Our conclusion that the federal government has the authority to bring an independent action against the industry does not suggest that we believe the industry would lose such a claim at trial. Instead, we believe that the federal judge who gets the case is unlikely to the government's claim outright, and would not rule for the industry on motion for summary judgment. Unlike the state suits, the federal government cannot claim that was not aware of the dangers of smoking, or was "duped" by the industry in paying for injuries caused by smoking. Unlike the states, there is a voluminous paper trail that the federal government has long been aware of the dangers of smoking (federal government put warning labels on packs in 1966, U.S. Surgeon General's reports warning of dangers of smoking since 1964; government's own research into the dangers of smoking dates back to the 1950s).

2. The search for closure. Dick Scruggs' invisible hand. As we have written about before, last Fall, plaintiff counsel Dick Scruggs tried to convince players on both sides to consider using a lawsuit by the federal government as a settlement vehicle that would give the industry resolution of the AG claims, and resolution of the personal injury claims as well. Scruggs' plan was to have the federal government bring a direct action for recovery of federal moneys paid under Medicare, Veterans, CHAMPUS, and other federal programs. DOJ and the industry would then enter into a consent decree whereby the industry would agree to drop its challenge to FDA jurisdiction, and agree to pay to the federal government some $368 billion over 25 years, including some $200 billion to resolv

We would have the 5 Cabinet secretaries on stage, as well as 3 success story employees from Fleet Bank.

Unfortunately there is not a "catchy" chart that we can use for the cutaway. So I think, we will stick with the Presidential Seal recommendation from Communications in terms of backdrop.

Draft 01/22/99 4:00pm

Jeff Shesol

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON

REMARKS ON WELFARE-TO-WORK INITIATIVES

THE WHITE HOUSE

January 25, 1999

Acknowledgments: Secs. Cuomo TBD, Herman, Shalala, Slater; Janice LaChance, Dir. of OPM; Aida Alvarez, Administrator of SBA; Gov. Mel Carnahan; father TBD; Fleet National Bank COO TBD

This new year, 1999, is just about my twentieth year of work on the welfare issue. As governor, I used to invite welfare recipients to talk to me and other governors about their experiences, and about the difference that work -- something as basic as a full-time job -- could make in their lives. We had to take their word for it, back then, because there were not many success stories of the transition from welfare-to-work. Welfare, as it existed then, seemed to promote dependence rather than independence. It seemed, to many Americans, to reward the wrong attitude while punishing the right one. Welfare wasn't working; and, it almost went without saying, welfare recipients weren't working.

In the past six years we have done much to change all that. When I became President, I worked with 43 states to craft their own programs to move Americans from welfare to work; and, in 1996, I signed the landmark bipartisan welfare reform law, ending the old system as we knew it. I said then that "our nation's answer to the problems of poverty will no longer be a never-ending cycle of welfare; it will be the dignity, the power, and the ethic of work.□8

Today, already, even our greatest hopes are being surpassed. Welfare rolls are the smallest in 30 years, down by 44 percent since I took office. More single parents are joining the workforce. Meanwhile, more welfare recipients are working than ever before; the number has tripled since 1992, and 1.5 million who were on welfare in 1997 were working in 1998.

The welfare system is no longer holding people back, it is moving them ahead, to a better future. Welfare reform alone did not achieve that; more was required of us, and that is why we have continued to support health care and child care for low-income families. That is why, back in 1993, we doubled the Earned Income Tax Credit, a targeted tax cut that is especially generous to low-income working families. For a family of four with an annual income of less than $30,000, that tax cut is worth about $1,000.

I have said that if we are going to require able-bodied people to take jobs, we have to make sure as a nation that there are jobs for them to take. In our strong and growing economy, the true engine of job growth is the private sector. Two years ago, I asked five companies to lead a national effort to hire people off welfare. Tonight, our Welfare to Work Partnership includes 10,000 companies who have hired hundreds of thousands of people. We□,ve heard some of those success stories this morning; and I know, between Eli Segal and companies like Fleet, we will be hearing many more in the years to come.

Smaller caseloads and bigger paychecks are important signs of progress. But they are not the only ones. The sense of pride, the sense of security of newly working Americans -- these are the best measures of our success. As more Americans gain the confidence that a full-time job can bring, we gain confidence that our new strategy is working and strengthen our determination to do more.

We know what works. Now we must ensure that it continues to do so. In my State of the Union Address last week, I said we can help another 200,000 Americans move from welfare to work. To achieve that goal, I propose that we renew the successful Welfare-to-Work program, which is set to expire in the year 2000. My balanced budget includes $1 billion to help states and communities build upon their record of success, to turn more long-term welfare recipients into full-time workers.

Of that $1 billion in new funds, we will dedicate $150 million to low-income fathers who fulfill their duty to work, to pay child support, and to become part of their children□,s lives again. Every father has that responsibility to his children and the mother of his children. And if every father paid the support they should, [TK] million women would go off the welfare rolls immediately. But some fathers have difficulty getting a job, and that is why many states are using some of their Welfare-to-work funds to help committed fathers of children on welfare -- fathers who sign personal responsibility contracts -- to get jobs. My balanced budget will help ensure every state can support fathers who support their families.

There is more we must do. Welfare recipients who remain on the rolls, in many cases, face the greatest challenges to entering the workforce. We know that if you can□,t get to work, you can□,t go to work. Two-thirds of new jobs are in the suburbs, but three-quarters of welfare recipients live in cities or rural areas. Most don□,t own cars -- and public transportation isn't much help when you're working nights or weekends. That is why my balanced budget will double funding to get workers to the workplace. I am also announcing a 50 percent increase in housing vouchers -- to help families find affordable homes, avoid those difficult commutes, and to get them closer to a new job and a better, brighter future.

Thanks to the efforts of companies like Fleet, officials like Governor Carnahan, and working Americans like [TK], more families are enjoying that kind of future. I urge Congress to renew an investment that is expandi

Next Friday, at 8:30 a.m., the mayors will be coming to the White House from their conference. There will be about 200 mayors here. As last year, there will be stand-up continental breakfast and then a seated meeting with POTUS. Unfortunately, we don't have seating in the meeting (except for COS and Dep. COS and maybe a few more). However, we would like to come and mingle with the mayors, talk up the budget and generally get some business done. They would love to see you. They will only be at breakfast until 9:00, so please try to come on time.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Bruce Reed
Elena Kagan

SUBJECT: DPC Weekly Report

Health Care -- Approval of Wisconsin's BadgerCare Program: On Friday, HHS approved Wisconsin's BadgerCare program, which is a combined Medicaid waiver and CHIP plan that expands Medicaid coverage to families with incomes below 185% of the Federal poverty level. This approval represents closure to a long-standing impasse between HCFA and Governor Thompson. Wisconsin originally proposed to use their CHIP allotment (and its higher Federal matching dollars) to cover both children and adults. Such an approach is inconsistent with the law that restricts CHIP funding to be used only for children (with limited exceptions) and was vigorously opposed by Congressional Democrats and advocates. The part of the compromise that was attractive to the Governor was the provision that allows the State to roll back coverage if it no longer has the financial resources to maintain the coverage expansion. He agreed to a Medicaid waiver rather than a CHIP waiver because he wanted his high priority BadgerCare program approved before his State of the State address next week. This action will likely be well received by Congressmen Barrett and Kletchka, who defended our opposition to the State's initial proposal but pushed us aggressively to find an acceptable conclusion. Wisconsin's program, when fully implemented, will provide health insurance coverage to over 23,000 children and 27,000 adults.

Health Care -- Dingle Meeting on Medicare and Patients Bill of Rights: At a Thursday meeting, Mr. Dingle pleaded with us to provide him with a clearer sense of where we wanted the Medicare Commission to go and to expedite our analysis of the Breaux Medicare reform concept. We gave him our commitment to do so. In the meantime, we are in the process of obtaining final estimates from the Medicare actuary and will keep you apprised of new analysis and developments on this issue. Mr. Dingle also indicated his desire to work closely with us in developing a strategy to pass a strong Patients Bill of Rights through the House. Earlier in the week, Congressman Ganske refused to cosponsor Mr. Dingle's reintroduced bill because he wanted to work out an alternative in the liability / enforcement section first. This provision of the bill, now even more vulnerable in the face of a rare $116 million judgement against Aetna Health Plans of California, has appeared to unsettle some of the Blue Dog Democrats and Republicans who initially cosponsored the Dingle-Ganske bill. We are reviewing compromises now on liability and enforcement that will keep our base of supporters for the original legislation while hopefully attracting a few more Republicans. As we do this, we will be closely consulting with Senator Daschle, Senator Kennedy, Senator Chafee and others.

Tobacco -- Tobacco Farmers: The four largest cigarette companies agreed Thursday to set up a $5.15 billion trust fund to help tobacco growers who face a shrinking market due to the state settlements that raised the price of smoking and is expected to reduce demand. The companies had agreed to meet with state officials to discuss the trust fund for farmers as part of the $206 billion state settlement last November. There are many details still to be worked out, but it was announced the funds would be distributed over 12 years. During the fund's first year, the companies would put in $380 million, (Philip Morris has already contributed $300 million, the bulk of the payment). The second year, the companies would deposit $280 million; the third year, $400 million; years four-10, $500 million a year; the 11th year, $440 million; and the 12th year, $150 million. Gov. Hunt, who helped spearhead the effort, said each state will receive a share of the fund equal to the amount of tobacco it grows. The eleven participating states are North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia. News stories quoted Governor Hunt as stating: "We all leave here today winners with a positive outlook for a measure of financial assistance for our tobacco farmers." Bruce Reed spoke with the Washington Post congratulating Governor Hunt and other state leaders for this positive step and reaffirming the Administration's commitment to protecting tobacco farmers and their communities. USDA will issue a similar statement. We have also spoken with leaders of some of the leading tobacco farmer organizations to explain recent Administration proposals and our continued commitment. The farm groups have expressed concern that a federal suit and new federal tax will further decrease demand for tobacco, but privately acknowledge that the threat of further federal action has thus far probably aided their efforts in negotiating the $5 billion trust fund.

Tobacco -- Lawsuit Announcement Reaction: Your announcement that the Department of Justice is preparing a plan to take the tobacco companies to court was a welcome surprise to our allies. Key member of Congress (Sens. Durbin and Kennedy) and public advocates (Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids) vigorously defended the basis and policy for such a suit. The announcement seemed to have caught the industry off guard. A joint statement by the big three cigarette producers called the plan a "political gesture" the continuation of "a witch hunt against a legal industry." Tobacco stocks fell sharply on Wednesday and the stock prices of both Philip Morris Inc. and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. were down again on Thursday.

Education -- Legislation Introduced in Senate: This week Senate Democrats introduced the Public Schools Excellence Act (S.7), which includes our school modernization and class size reduction proposals and an after school initiative which incorporates both the 21st Century Learning Program and funds for community-based after-school programs through the Child Care and Development Block Grant. The bill also includes a Teacher Excellence Act which closely tracks one we have been developing as well as relevant aspects of your accountability proposals. The bill would provide $1.2 billion to states and local school districts to help raise teacher certification standards, recruit excellent teacher candidates, retain and support promising beginning teachers and provide veteran teachers and principals with ongoing professional development needed to help all children meet high standards. Under this teacher quality proposal, states and school districts would be accountable for reducing the number of teachers with emergency credential and out-of-field placement of teachers.

Senate Republicans also introduced a bill to extend ESEA this week. However, the bill contains only a statement of themes and principals -- returning control to parents, supporting exceptional teachers, making schools safe, directing federal dollars to the classroom, and stressing basic skills and proven practices -- that will eventually be translated into specific legislative proposals.

Education -- Ed-Flex: Chairmen Goodling and Jeffords, with strong support from the Speaker, the Senate Majority Leader and NGA, are planning to mark up Ed-Flex legislation (which would extend the authority to waive many federal education requirements to all 50 states, in exchange for a system of standards, school report cards, and state intervention in low performing schools). as early as next week, with the intention of moving it on a fast track, separate from the ESEA reauthorization. Goodling in particular has indicated a desire to work with us to fashion a bipartisan bill, ostensibly in order to set a bipartisan context for work on ESEA, though we suspect also to create some tension between us and committee Democrats who last year showed little interest in this proposal. While we would prefer to take up any Ed-Flex proposal in the context of ESEA, we believe our support for this proposal last year will make it difficult for us to oppose speedy action on it now. As we consult with Kennedy, Clay and others on the hill, our overall strategy will be to (1) emphasize our support for the principles of more accountability and more flexibility (2) stress our preference to take Ed-Flex up as part of ESEA reauthorization (3) insist that any Ed-Flex provision that moves in advance of ESEA be revisited during the reauthorization process, and be drafted so as to not permit states to waive the new accountability provisions announced in your State of the Union address.

Education -- Reaction to your accountability proposals: Overall initial reaction to your education proposals has generally been positive within the education community and in the press. The education community is supportive of your proposals, understands clearly the need to meet the challenges of raising standards, turning around failing schools, ending social promotions and the use of unqualified teachers. At the same time, many are worried about their capacity to meet these challenges, and will be looking to the Administration's budget and ESEA reauthorization proposals for financial, programmatic and technical support to carry out the needed reforms. Your proposals have also generated considerable press attention, with several stories this week in the New York Times, Washington Post, and USA Today. These stories have focused on the content of your proposals -- particularly on the pro's and con's of ending social promotion -- and on the threat that states and school systems could lose funding if they fail to implement them. There have been a number of favorable editorials, including one by Diane Ravitch in the Wall Street Journal, NYU education professor John Zimmerman in the New York Times, and Timothy Noah in Slate magazine. Criticisms of your proposal have come from David Broder, who charges that your proposals merely replicate and add a layer of federal bureaucracy to what the states are already doing, and Lamar Alexander, Checker Finn are quoted in a number of stories criticizing your proposal as a federal takeover of state and local education systems.

Welfare Reform -- Welfare-to-Work Event Next Week: Monday's welfare to work event will give you the opportunity to celebrate the success of welfare reform and underscore the need for the new welfare-to-work initiatives in your budget. With welfare caseloads down by nearly half and over 10,000 companies committed to welfare-to-work, you will announce a new package of initiatives designed to ensure that those remaining on the welfare rolls make a successful transition from welfare to work, with a new focus on increasing the employment of low-income fathers so they can support their children. Your $1 billion Welfare-to-Work initiative will provide a minimum of $150 million to ensure every state helps fathers fulfill their responsibilities to their children by working and paying child support. Remaining funds will focus on those long term welfare recipients with the greatest challenges to employment such as limited English proficiency, substance abuse problems, and disabilities. You will also announce that your budget will contain new welfare to work housing vouchers, transportation funds, and tax credits to help those on welfare get to work and stay employed. Taken together, these initiatives will provide parents the tools they need to support their children and succeed in the workforce. Besides highlighting these initiatives, the event will provide you with the opportunity to recognize the 10,000 businesses of all sizes, industries and regions who have joined the Welfare to Work Partnership and are learning every day that hiring from the welfare rolls is good business. Since May, the number of companies in the Partnership has doubled from 5,000 to 10,000.

Welfare -- Legal Immigrant Benefits: On Monday while in California the Vice President is going to announce the Administration's new budget proposal which restores $1.3 billion in health, disability and nutritional assistance programs for legal immigrants. This proposal builds on this progress we've already made because of your leadership: the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 restored disability and health benefits to 420,000 legal immigrants who were in this country before welfare reform became law, at an estimated cost of $11.5 billion, and the Agricultural Research Act of 1998 provided Food Stamps for 225,000 legal immigrant children, senior citizens, and people with disabilities who came to the United States by August 22, 1996. The new budget proposal will 1) restore eligibility for SSI and Medicaid to legal immigrants who enter the U.S. after the enactment of welfare reform on August 22, 1996, become disabled, and have been in the U.S. for five years (this costs approximately $930 million and will assist an estimated 54,000 legal immigrants by 2004, about half of whom will be elderly); 2) builds on the progress made in the Agricultural Research Act by allowing legal immigrants in the United States on August 22, 1996 who subsequently reach age 65 to be eligible for Food Stamps, at cost of $60 million; and 3) provides states the option to provide health coverage through CHIP or Medicaid to legal immigrant children and pregnant legal immigrant women who entered the U.S. after August 22, 1996 (costing $325 million and serving approximately 78,000 women and children).

Civil Rights -- English Language/Civics Initiative: On Monday January 25th, while in Los Angeles, the Vice President will announce the English Language/Civics initiative that is part of your FY 2000 budget. This $70 million initiative is designed to help states and communities provide expanded access to high quality English language proficiency instruction, linked to practical instruction in civics and life skills including how to navigate the workplace, public education system, and other essentials. This initiative will both help meet the extraordinary demand for English and civics instruction in immigrant communities and will demonstrate our shared commitment to fully integrating new Americans into our social and civic life. States, community-based organizations, local education agencies, and other non-profits will compete for grants to support English proficiency and civics instruction. With $70 million, the initiative will be able to provide English language and civics instruction to approximately 150,000 people in FY 2000.

Drugs -- Republican Legislation: On Tuesday, Senate Republicans introduced an omnibus drug bill, the Drug Free Century Act. The bill's major titles cover international supply reduction, domestic law enforcement and domestic demand reduction. We are working with the agencies to review the specifics of the proposed bill. Among the bill's key provisions:

International Supply Reduction: Strengthens punishment for violent crimes committed along the border; establishes penalties for exporting contraband; provides for extradition in certain instances without a treaty; and expands penalties for and reports requirements to deter money laundering.

Domestic Law Enforcement: Doubles the number of border patrol agents to 15,000 by FY 2004; increases mandatory penalties for powder cocaine sentencing (from 5 kilograms to 500 grams for a 10-year sentence, and from 500 grams to 50 grams for a 5-year sentence); and enhances penalties for certain drug offenses committed in the presence of children.

Domestic Demand Reduction: Prohibits federal funding of needle exchange programs; authorizes a $10 million drug-free teen drivers incentive grant program; and establishes new $5 million DEA drug-free families grant program.

Funding for Counter-Drug Enforcement Agencies: Increases funding and establishes earmarks for specific Customs, Coast Guard, DEA, Treasury and Defense counternarcotic operations.

The bill contains many provisions which were introduced by Congressional Republicans last year. We also expect Senate Republicans to submit omnibus crime legislation in the coming week.

Crime -- Gun Shows: In response to your 11/6/98 directive, the Treasury and Justice Departments are ready to submit a joint report to you with their recommendations on gun shows. The report indicates that there were over 4,400 gun shows advertised in 1998, most of which were promoted by about 175 firearm collector organizations and individuals. While federally-licensed firearms dealers (FFLs) comprise 50 to 75 percent of the vendors at most gun shows -- and are required by the Brady Act to conduct background checks on prospective purchasers -- non-FFL vendors are under no legal obligation to conduct a background check or keep records on their sales, making it impossible for law enforcement to trace firearms they sell which are later recovered at crime scenes.

The report confirms that gun shows provide a forum for illegal firearms sales and trafficking, and serve as a source for firearms used in crimes. In compiling the report, Treasury and Justice reviewed 314 gun show-related investigations involving more than 54,000 firearms. The investigations span a wide range of federal firearms violations, including straw purchases, transactions by FFLs without Brady checks, and the sale of kits to modify semiautomatic firearms into automatic firearms. Over 46 percent of the investigations involving gun shows involved felons buying or selling firearms. In more than a third of the investigations, the firearms involved were known to have been used in subsequent crimes, including homicide, assault, robbery, and drug offenses. Many of the investigations involve numerous firearms: more than a third involved over 50 firearms and about one-tenth involved over 250 firearms.

In order to close the gun show "loophole", Secretary Rubin and Attorney General Reno's key recommendations include:

- (1) Broadly defining "gun shows", to cover not only traditional gun shows but also flea markets and other similar venues where firearms are sold.
- (2) Requiring gun show promoters to register with ATF. Promoters would be required to provide the time and location of every gun show, a list of vendors (both FFLs and non-FFLs), ensure that all vendors are given information about their legal obligations, and require vendors to acknowledge receipt of it. Failure to fulfill these obligations could result in revocation or suspension of registration or civil or criminal penalties.
- (3) Requiring Brady background checks on all firearms transferred at gun shows. All firearms would be transferred by, or with the assistance of an FFL. Thus, FFLs would conduct a Brady checks and retain records for all sales by a non-FFL.

Automated Records Management System

(4) Reporting information to the ATF's National Tracing Center (NTC) on firearms sold at gun shows. This would require FFLs to submit certain information (e.g., manufacturer, serial number) on all firearms transferred at gun shows to ATF's NTC and retain such information to assist in future firearms trace requests by law enforcement.

(5) Developing an educational campaign, in conjunction with the firearms industry, to encourage all firearms owners to take steps to ensure that firearms do not fall into the hands of prohibited persons such as criminals or juveniles.

In addition, the Departments are continuing to review the definition of "engaged in the business" of selling firearms to make future legislative and regulatory recommendations. The Gun Control Act requires that those who seek to "engage in the business" of importing, manufacturing, or dealing in firearms must obtain a Federal firearms license. Engaging in the business without a license was involved in more than half of the 314 investigations reviewed by Treasury and Justice.

The report also recommends committing more resources to combat illegal firearms sales at gun shows. Your FY 2000 budget includes $24 million in new funds for firearms enforcement, a portion of which Treasury/ATF will use to bolster their enforcement efforts at gun shows.

Draft 01/22/99 5:00pm

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON

REMARKS ON WELFARE-TO-WORK INITIATIVES

THE WHITE HOUSE

January 25, 1999

Acknowledgments: Secs. Herman, Shalala, Slater, Cuomo TBD; Janice LaChance, Dir. of OPM; Aida Alvarez, Administrator of SBA; Gov. Mel Carnahan; father TBD; Robert Higgins, Fleet Bank President and Chief Operating Officer

This new year, 1999, is just about my twentieth year of work on the welfare issue. As governor, I used to invite former welfare recipients to panel discussions, to talk to me and other governors about the difference that work -- something as basic as a full-time job -- had made in their lives. We had to take their word for it, back then, because there were not many success stories of the transition from welfare to work. Welfare, as it existed then, seemed to promote dependence rather than independence. It seemed, to many Americans, to reward the wrong attitude while punishing the right one.

In the past six years we have done much to change all that. When I became President, I worked with 43 states, freeing them from federal strictures, enabling them to create new, innovative programs that move Americans from welfare to work; and, in 1996, I signed the landmark bipartisan welfare reform law, ending the old system as we knew it. I said then that "our nation's answer to the problems of poverty will no longer be a never-ending cycle of welfare; it will be the dignity, the power, and the ethic of work."

Today, already, even our greatest hopes are being surpassed. Welfare rolls are the smallest in 30 years, down by 44 percent since I took office. More single parents are joining the workforce. And overall, just in the past year, 1.5 million who were on welfare in 1997 were working in 1998.

The welfare system is no longer holding people back; it is helping them move ahead. Welfare reform alone could not achieve that. That is why we have continued to support health care and child care for low-income families. And we have doubled the Earned Income Tax Credit, a targeted tax cut that is especially generous to low-income working families. For a family of four with an annual income of less than $30,000, that tax cut is worth about $1,000.

I have said that if we are going to require able-bodied people to take jobs, we have to make sure as a nation that there are jobs for them to take. In our strong and growing economy, the true engine of job growth is the private sector. Two years ago, I asked five companies to lead a national effort to hire people off welfare. Tonight, our Welfare to Work Partnership includes 10,000 companies who have hired hundreds of thousands of people. We've heard some of those success stories this morning; and I know, between Eli Segal and companies like Fleet, we will be hearing many more in the years to come.

Smaller caseloads and bigger paychecks are important signs of progress. But they are not the only ones. The sense of pride, the sense of security of newly working Americans -- these are the best measures of our success. As more Americans gain the confidence that a full-time job can bring, we gain confidence that our new strategy is working and strengthen our determination to do more.

We know what works. We know how to turn long-term welfare recipients into full-time workers. Now, as we move into the 21st Century, we must ensure that even more Americans move from welfare to work. In my State of the Union Address last week, I said we can help another 200,000 Americans move from welfare to work. To achieve that goal, I propose that we renew the successful Welfare-to-Work program, which is set to expire in the year 2000. My balanced budget includes $1 billion to help states and communities build upon their record of success. A little more than half of those funds will extend, for another year, the tax credits that help more employers hire more people off welfare.

I am also announcing that my budget dedicates $150 million to low-income fathers who fulfill their duty to work, to pay child support, and to become part of their children's lives again. Every father has that responsibility to his children and the mother of his children. And if all fathers paid the support they should, [TK] million women would go off the welfare rolls immediately. But some fathers have difficulty getting a job, and that is why many states are using some of their Welfare-to-work funds to help committed fathers of children on welfare -- fathers who sign personal responsibility contracts -- to get jobs. My balanced budget will help ensure every state can support fathers who support their families.

There is more we must do. Welfare recipients who remain on the rolls, in many cases, face the greatest challenges to entering the workforce. We know that if you can't get to work, you can't go to work. Two-thirds of new jobs are in the suburbs, but three-quarters of welfare recipients live in cities or rural areas. That is why my balanced budget will double funding to get workers to the workplace. I am also announcing a 50 percent increase in housing vouchers -- to help families find affordable homes, avoid those difficult commutes, and to get them closer to a new job and a better, brighter future.

Thanks to the efforts of companies like Fleet, officials like Governor Carnahan, and working Americans like [TK], more families are enjoying that kind of future. Across our nation, governors and mayors and counties are joining with the private sector to develop new ways to move people from welfare to work. We do not have all the answers here in Washington. But there is at least one thing we can do -- and that is to renew an investment that is expanding opportunity and rewarding responsibility for millions of Americans. I urge the Congress to do exactly that. In that way, we can continue to make good on what I called, two years ago, a historic chance to make welfare what it was meant to be: a second chance, not a way of life. We can go farther toward fulfilling our nation's basic bargain -- to reward the hard work of our citizens, and to give them the tools to succeed in changing and exciting times. Thank you.

In the Senate, Democrats may opposing any legislative activity next week. If this bill is marked up next week, Sen. Kennedy and other Democrats are planning to offer our class size reduction proposal and other Democratic initiatives as amendments, though they will ultimately support Ed-Flex in committee if an acceptable version is offered. In the House, Goodling has indicated a desire to work with us to fashion a bipartisan bill. However, Mr. Clay and most other Democrats show little enthusiasm for any version of Ed-Flex, and we think the odds of bipartisan action are slim. While we would prefer to take up any Ed-Flex proposal in the context of ESEA, we believe our support for this proposal last year will make it difficult for us to oppose speedy action on it now. TEXT:

HERE YOU GO ELENA. I THINK JOHN P. WOULD WANT MOST OF THIS, BUT I DEFER TO YOU:

Update on Senator Breau's new Medicare restructuring proposal. On Friday, Senator Breau released his draft working plan on Medicare reform. Although the 6-page outline has some positive or potentially positive concepts, it has infuriated most Democrats, largely because of its weak guarantee of defined benefits, its increase in the eligibility age (without any commensurate policy to guard against an increase in the uninsured population), and its lack of a prescription drug benefit. This has led to an almost uncontrollable sense of mistrust of the Senator, who had promised Democrats more input into the document prior to any release.

The Democrats perceive much of the Breau plan to be little more than the approach that is being advocated by Congressman Thomas. In addition, because we have not openly criticized Senator Breau's plan, there is a growing feeling amongst the Democrats that the Administration may be sending (implicit or explicit) signals that we find his package to be acceptable. Moreover, many Democrats (wrongly) fear that Laura Tyson and Stuart Altman would support Breau's current proposal. Because of the Democrats' reaction, Senator Breau is now publicly saying that he personally would like to see that the program has a prescription drug benefit. Although this will be generally welcomed by the Democrats, they will likely take a "we will believe it when we see it" position. With each new conflict with the Democrats, Senator Breau can be expected to request our assistance to both develop a more viable policy for him and to help attract Democratic support for the Commission's recommendation. We will need to make a determination with you as to the best way to respond to the potentially conflicting desires of Senator Breau and the base Democrats, as well as to decide whether it is in our interest to use the Commission to provide cover for some potentially controversial ideas for Medicare reform.

Stem cell update. On January 19th, Dr. Varmus testified that the General Counsel for the Department of Health and Human Services ruled that the Congressional ban on human embryo research does not apply to stem cell research, since the cells cannot be considered embryos as they do not have the capacity to develop into a human being. This ruling, which means that Federally financed researchers will soon be able to work on human embryonic stem cells, was well received by Congressional Democrats, the scientific community, and advocates for the aging, who are intrigued by the potential this research has to provide cures for diseases like diabetes and Alzheimer's. The only opposition came from expected sources -- the Catholic Bishops, who fear this new research will create incentives for additional abortions, and the American Society for Reproductive Medicine, who was critical that we did not take the position of repealing the ban on fetal research altogether. We believe that the roll-out went as planned and that you are positioned on this issue in a way that avoids controversy and allows for continued scientific advance in these critical areas.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON
REMARKS ON WELFARE-TO-WORK INITIATIVES
THE WHITE HOUSE
January 25, 1999

Acknowledgments: Secs. Herman, Shalala, Slater, Cuomo TBD; Reps. Ben Cardin & Ruben Hinojosa; Janice LaChance, Dir. of OPM; Aida Alvarez, Administrator of SBA; Gov. Mel Carnahan; Robert Higgins, Fleet Bank President and Chief Operating Officer; Carlos Garcia

In 1992, when I ran for President, I told Americans that there were few things more important than reforming our welfare system. A lot of people agreed that we should change welfare, but not everybody believed that we could do it. After all, this was a system that had trapped generations in a culture of dependency; there were neighborhoods where, quite simply, no one worked. The government's compact with the people seemed, somehow, to have broken down. The wrong values were being rewarded; and the right ones, it appeared, were being punished.

In the past six years we have done much to change all that. When I became President, I worked with 43 states, freeing them from federal strictures, enabling them to create new, innovative programs that move Americans from welfare to work; and, in 1996, I signed the landmark bipartisan welfare reform law, ending the old system as we knew it. I said then that "our nation's answer to the problems of poverty will no longer be a never-ending cycle of welfare; it will be the dignity, the power, and the ethic of work." Today, if we stay on the new path we have forged, I believe we will break that cycle of dependence for good, and it will be one of our greatest accomplishments as a nation.

Already, even our greatest hopes are being surpassed. Welfare rolls are the smallest in 30 years, down by 44 percent since I took office. In the same period, the number of welfare recipients who are working -- taking that first step toward responsibility -- has tripled. And every state is meeting the work participation standards required under welfare reform. Simply put, America is working again -- proving that something as basic as a full-time job can transform a life or a whole family.

The welfare system is no longer holding people back; it is helping them move ahead. Welfare reform alone could not achieve that. That is why we have continued to support health care and child care for low-income families. And we have doubled the Earned Income Tax Credit, a targeted tax cut that is especially generous to low-income working families. For a family of four with an annual income of less than $30,000, that tax cut is worth about $1,000.

I have said that if we are going to require able-bodied people to take jobs, we have to make sure as a nation that there are jobs for them to take. In our strong and growing economy, the true engine of job growth is the private sector. Two years ago, I asked five companies to lead a national effort to hire people off welfare. Today, our Welfare to Work Partnership includes 10,000 companies who have hired, retained, and promoted hundreds of thousands of people. It's not a charity; it's good for families and good for the bottom line. We've heard some of those success stories this morning; and I know, between Eli Segal and companies like Fleet, we will be hearing many more in the years to come.

Smaller caseloads and bigger paychecks are important signs of progress. But they are not the only ones. The sense of pride, the sense of security of newly working Americans -- these are the best measures of our success. As more Americans gain the confidence that a full-time job can bring, we gain more confidence that our new strategy is working -- and strengthen our determination to do more.

We know what works. We know how to turn long-term welfare recipients into full-time workers. Now, as we move into the 21st Century, we must ensure that even more Americans move from welfare to work. In my State of the Union Address last week, I said we can help another 200,000 Americans make that transition. To achieve that goal, I propose that we renew the successful Welfare-to-Work program, which is set to expire in the year 2000. My balanced budget includes $1 billion to help states and communities build upon their record of success.

My budget dedicates $150 million of those funds to low-income fathers who fulfill their duty to work, to pay child support, and to become part of their children's lives again. Every father has that responsibility to his children and the mother of his children. But, as Carlos Garcia just told us, some fathers have difficulty getting or keeping a job, and that is why many states are using some of their welfare-to-work funds to help committed fathers of children on welfare -- fathers who sign personal responsibility contracts -- to get jobs. My balanced budget will help ensure every state can support fathers who support their families.

But there is more we must do. America has achieved the longest peacetime expansion in our history. And as our economy continues to grow, businesses reach farther and wider to hire new talent, bringing more welfare recipients into the workplace. We can -- and must -- use this moment to make permanent our gains on welfare. Our prosperity gives us this opportunity, and makes it an obligation.

We must, therefore, do more to help welfare recipients who remain on the rolls. In many cases, they are the ones who face the greatest challenges to entering the workforce. We know that if you can't get to work, you can't go to work. Two-thirds of new jobs are in the suburbs, but three-quarters of welfare recipients live in cities or rural areas. That is why my balanced budget will double the funding to get workers to the workplace. I am also announcing a 50 percent increase in housing vouchers -- to help families find affordable homes, avoid those difficult commutes, and to get them closer to a new job and a better, brighter future.

Thanks to the efforts of companies like Fleet, officials like Governor Carnahan, and working Americans like Carlos Garcia, more families are enjoying that kind of future. Across our nation, governors and mayors and county officials are joining with the private sector to develop new ways to move people from welfare to work. I urge the Congress to renew an investment that is expanding opportunity and rewarding responsibility for millions of Americans. In that way, we can continue to make good on what I called, two years ago, "a historic chance to make welfare what it was meant to be: a second chance, not a way of life." We can go farther toward fulfilling our nation's basic bargain -- to reward the hard work of our citizens, and to give them the tools to succeed in changing and exciting times. Thank you.

WELFARE TO WORK EVENT

DATE: January 25, 1999
LOCATION: Presidential Hall
Room 450, Old Executive Office Building
BRIEFING TIME: 9:45am - 10:10am
EVENT TIME: 10:15am - 11:15am

I. PURPOSE

With welfare caseloads down by nearly half since 1993 and over 10,000 companies committed to welfare-to-work, you will announce today a new package of initiatives designed to ensure that those remaining on the welfare rolls make a successful transition from welfare to work, with a new focus on increasing the employment of low-income fathers so they can support their children. Your $1 billion Welfare-to-Work initiative will help 200,000 more people go to work. At least $150 million will go toward helping fathers fulfill their responsibilities to their children by working and paying child support. Remaining funds will focus on long-term welfare recipients with the greatest obstacles to employment. You also will announce today that your budget will contain new welfare-to-work housing vouchers, transportation funds, and tax credits to help those on welfare get to work and stay employed. Taken together, these initiatives will provide parents the tools they need to support their children and succeed in the workforce.

II. BACKGROUND

Welfare-to-Work Funds with a Focus on Fathers

Your $1 billion Welfare-to-Work initiative will help 200,000 long-term welfare recipients in high-poverty areas move into lasting unsubsidized employment. It is an extension of the two-year $3 billion Welfare-to-Work program you secured in the Balanced Budget Act. The initiative, as reauthorized, will provide at least $150 million to ensure that every state helps fathers fulfill their responsibilities by working, paying child support, and playing a responsible part in their children's lives. Under this proposal, states and communities will use a minimum of 20 percent of their formula funds to provide job placement and job retention assistance to low-income fathers who sign personal responsibility contracts committing them to work and pay child support. This effort will further increase child support collections, which have risen 80 percent since you took office, from $8 billion in 1992 to $14.4 billion in 1998. Remaining funds will go toward assisting long-term welfare recipients with the greatest barriers to employment to move into lasting jobs. The reauthorized program also will double the welfare-to-work funding available for tribes.

The Department of Labor will announce today the availability of $240 million in competitive grants from the current $3 billion Welfare-to-Work program. These funds will support innovative local welfare-to-work strategies for individuals with limited English proficiency, disabilities, substance abuse problems, or a history of domestic violence.

Transportation and Housing for Families Moving From Welfare to Work

You also will announce today that your budget will contain $580 million for welfare to work housing vouchers and transportation assistance to help those on welfare get to work and stay employed. Your budget will provide $430 million for 75,000 welfare-to-work housing vouchers, including $144 million in new funds for 25,000 additional vouchers. This is a 50 percent increase over the 50,000 vouchers you secured last year. The vouchers will help families move closer to a new job, reduce a long commute, or secure more stable housing so they can perform better on the job. Your budget will also increase Access to Jobs transportation funding from $75 million to $150 million, doubling the number of individuals and communities that can receive transportation assistance. This competitive grant program supports innovative state and local transportation solutions such as shuttles, van pools, new bus routes, and connector services to mass transit to help welfare recipients and other low income workers get to work.

Private Sector Hiring from the Welfare Rolls

You will announce that your budget will include $530 million to extend for one year the Welfare to Work and Work Opportunity Tax Credits to encourage more employers to hire welfare recipients and other disadvantaged individuals. Already, in response to your challenge two years ago in the State of the Union, 10,000 companies have joined the Welfare to Work Partnership and hired, retained, and promoted hundreds of thousands of former welfare recipients. Forty-two percent of these companies are very small businesses (25 or fewer employees), while four percent are very large businesses (3,000 or more employees).

Welfare Rolls Decline as More Recipients go to Work

You will release state-by-state data showing that welfare caseloads are at their lowest level in 30 years and that the welfare rolls have fallen by nearly half since you took office.

Since January 1993, 36 states have had caseload declines of more than 40 percent and nationwide the rolls have fallen by 44 percent, from 14.1 million to just below 8 million. Recent information released by the Department of Health and Human Services also shows that the percentage of welfare recipients working has tripled since 1992, that an estimated 1.5 million people who were on welfare in 1997 were working in 1998, and that all states met the first overall work participation rates required under the welfare reform law.

BODY:

The number of people on welfare has fallen to its lowest level in 30 years, President Clinton will announce Monday. But the new figures also show the dramatic declines of recent years are beginning to slow in certain states.

The president will also offer a package of programs aimed at helping more people get to jobs and encouraging businesses to continue hiring them.

Nationally, just under 8 million people remained on welfare at the end of September, down 44 percent from 14.3 million in 1994. But state officials and academics alike have long cautioned that, at some point, nearly all the people who can move off welfare with relative ease will have left. That will leave those with deeper problems like substance abuse, domestic violence and very little education.

"With welfare reform, the more you succeed, the harder the job becomes," said Don Winstead, who heads Florida's welfare reform program.

Clinton hopes to make that job easier. Administration officials said he will announce proposals included in the budget he will submit to Congress next month, including:

$1 billion to help 200,000 long-term welfare recipients in high-poverty areas move to work. It's the continuation of a two-year-old program with a new requirement that 20 percent be used for low-income fathers.

$430 million to give 75,000 housing vouchers that help people on welfare move closer to a new job.

$150 million in transportation money to help people get to jobs, often in suburbs not served by public transportation.

Automated Records Management System
Hex-Dump Conversion

$530 million to extend the tax credit for businesses that hire people off welfare.

As he did in his State of the Union address, the president will also trumpet the falling welfare numbers.

"On a national basis, the caseload drop has been remarkably steady," said Bruce Reed, the president's chief domestic policy adviser.

But the figures show the drops in some states may have begun to slow in the final quarter of fiscal year 1998. In at least eight states, most of which have seen incredible drops since 1993, the reductions slowed to a trickle in July, August and September 1998.

"There's a difference between the first three quarters of the year and the last quarter of the year," said Michael Kharfen, a Department of Health and Human Services spokesman.

State officials say they are preparing to serve welfare recipients with tougher problems, moving beyond the "work first" approach that helps recipients look for work and then pushes them to take any job they can find. Under work first, states don't try to solve every problem or get people the education they may need. They simply try to find them jobs, reasoning that work experience will help them move up the economic ladder.

But that isn't enough for everyone, state officials say.

"We're past the situation where someone comes in who may need a little bit of confidence building, who may need a brush-up on skills and may need a new battery for the car all things we can do," said John Garlinger of the Kansas Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services. "We are left with the hard-core people."

Kansas has cut its welfare rolls by 62 percent since 1993, but by the end of the last fiscal year, healthy quarterly drops of 8 to 10 percent fell to just 1.7 percent.

Other states seeing dropoffs include Arizona, Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Massachusetts and North Carolina. New Mexico, after nearly cutting its roles in half, actually saw a 40 percent increase during 1998.

Seasonal variations may explain some of it. In Massachusetts, the rolls always stay higher near September, when the state gives clothing vouchers for every child on welfare.

Automated Records Management System
Hex-Dump Conversion

But other states say they have begun to "bottom out."

"We knew that after that wave of families went off the rolls, the somewhat harder work would begin," said Joe Quinn, spokesman for the Arkansas Department of Human Services. In Arkansas, the rolls fell just 2.7 percent in the last quarter after drops of about 9 percent in previous quarters.

In Kansas, officials are working with community mental health centers to aid people with substance abuse problems. They are screening for learning disabilities and training caseworkers to spot victims of domestic violence.

Jack Tweedie, who tracks welfare reform for the National Conference of State Legislatures, said states are financially prepared to work with harder-to-serve people because of the money saved from fewer people getting checks.

Reed, Clinton's adviser, isn't convinced the decrease has slowed, but says the president's proposals will help when it inevitably does.

"A lot of people thought we'd hit that point a long time ago," he said, "and more of the people on welfare have responded more quickly than anyone anticipated."
