ATT TO: John A. Koskinen (KOSKINEN_J)

ATT TO: Elena Kagan (KAGAN_E)

TEXT:

I was just up meeting w/ the House Judiciary Comm. staff on the PTO bill (John: I'm sure John Kamensky will give you a summary; it was a good and short (!!) meeting.) When I indicated that we had not reached a final Administration position on the congressional notification issue, Rep. Schroeder's staff person spoke up to complain about Members reading it in the newspaper rather than being informed by the White House when someone senior is fired. She implied that that was the motivation (at least on Schroeder's part) for the language on notification.

I don't have a view on the disagreement between NPR/OMB and Counsel's office. But if Counsel's view prevails, one compromise w/ the Hill might be to have the President simply notify Congress without giving a reason for the removal of the Commissioner.

thanks and thanks. we're supposedly getting a memo from OLC today, though they're usually late.

I got a call from a VP of the NYSE yesterday. They are running something in their newsletter (which goes to all CEOs of NYSE companies) on where the candidates stand on the California referendum. She wanted to know whether we had a written statement on the subject or even a transcript of oral remarks. Do we? What do you think we should tell her?

MEMORANDUM FOR THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE

THE SECRETARY OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

THE SECRETARY OF STATE

THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION

THE ADMINISTRATOR OF THE FEDERAL EMERGENCY

MANAGEMENT AGENCY AND

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL TRANSPORTATION SAFETY

BOARD

SUBJECT: Assistance to Families Affected By Aviation and
Other Transportation Disasters

When an aviation or other transportation disaster occurs, the federal government properly bears responsibility for addressing the needs of families of the passengers involved. In the event of a disaster occurring abroad, the State Department currently performs such functions. In the event of a disaster determined to result from criminal activity, the Department of Justice aids the families of victims. No unit of the federal government, however, now has clear responsibility, authority, and capacity to assist families of passengers involved in domestic disasters not determined to be criminal.

To fill this gap, I am asking the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), as the unit of the federal government with the lead role in investigating transportation disasters, to coordinate the provision of federal services to the families of victims. Such services might include, as appropriate in the circumstances, providing speedy and accurate information about the accident and recovery efforts, ensuring that families who wish to travel to the accident site receive all necessary assistance, and arranging opportunities for counseling and other support. I am also asking the NTSB to work cooperatively with state and local authorities and with private relief organizations, such as the Red Cross, to ensure appropriate coordination of the services they provide with those of the federal government.

To enable the NTSB to perform these coordinating functions effectively, I am directing the heads of the Departments of Defense, Health and Human Services, Justice, State, and Transportation, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency to recognize the NTSB as the coordinator of services to families and to cooperate fully with the NTSB regarding the prompt and effective delivery of such services.

In particular, within 15 days of my signing this directive, the head of each listed agency or department is to designate an official who has primary responsibility for working with the NTSB to provide services to families. Within 30 days of this designation, each listed agency or department is to enter into a memorandum of understanding with the NTSB, specifying services the agency or department will provide at NTSB's request, as well as specifying any other cooperative arrangements to go into effect in the event of an aviation or other transportation disaster. The heads of the listed agencies and departments shall notify me promptly of all such memoranda.

By ensuring that a single agency has the responsibility to coordinate the provision of support services and the authority to call on other departments and agencies to provide such services, this directive will improve the capacity of the federal government to address the needs of the families of victims of aviation and other transportation disasters. In so doing, it may provide some small measure of comfort to families that have suffered grievous loss.

ATT SUBJECT: APWA Child Support Case Update

ATT TO: Carol H. Rasco (RASCO_C)

ATT CC: Jeremy D. Benami (BENAMI_J)

TEXT:

With about 98.9% certainty the Solicitor General will file a "Friend of the Court" brief that supports the plaintiff in the Blessing v. Freestone case on either September 26th or 27th.

Background

The plaintiff (Freestone) is actually 6 individual plaintiffs who sued Arizona for failure to administer an adequate child support system. The case was thrown out of District court on August 12, 1993. The plaintiffs found success on October 12, 1995 when the 9th Circuit reversed the decision. On May 3, 1996 Arizona appealed under the Supreme Court - where we are now.

Freestone's Argument

There arguments range from the state's failure to establish a child support order to the state's failure to enact wage withholding even when given the employment information of the non-custodial parent. The plaintiffs simply want action. Please note, nothing in this suit entitles the plaintiffs to success, i.e. receiving child support payments. A positive outcome for the plaintiff can only force Arizona to take some action.

Arizona's Case and APWA's Argument

(Linda Blessing is the Director of Arizona's Dept. of Economic Security) As you know, APWA sent a letter to you encouraging the Administration not to file a brief. The argument of Arizona and APWA is that according to IV-A statutes states only have to "substantially comply" which means adequately serve 75% of the population. (Please note that IV-D does not have compliance language therefore IV-A is used since states must run a child support system in order to receive IV-A funds.) APWA is also saying that the federal government is imposing additional requirements.

HHS General Counsel and Solicitor General Perspective

The dilemma here is that to a certain degree the state is accurate. The definition of "substantially comply" is ambiguous. However, since states have clearly stated Congressional guidelines as well as federal incentives to provide better services, they should do so. Thus, while the Administration files a brief that is diplomatic and outlines the complexity of this case it will support the plaintiff. (HHS Counsel really wants the case to be pushed back to the 9th Circuit for further consideration, particularly given the new welfare rules.)

One of the issues is that states currently have no fair hearing requirements. (some states may have volunteer systems) So there is no way for an individual to complain about the system and have action taken on their behalf. In this particular case Arizona has had one of the worst child support programs and have been both penalized and audited in the past by HHS.

I hope this is helpful. If any additional issues come up during the Sept. 9 -10 conference please let me know. HHS Counsel stands ready to assist if it becomes a major issue.

TEXT:

1. Just to clarify: the two provisions relating to new residents are at 402(a)(1)(B)(i) and 404(c). The former, if taken alone, would suggest that Wisconsin does not need a waiver to implement its proposed 60-day waiting period; the latter, if taken alone, would suggest that Wisconsin does need a waiver to take this action. It is unclear what the answer should be given that both these provisions -- 402 seeming to countenance any differential treatment of new residents, 404 seeming to countenance only one kind (and not Wisconsin's kind) of differential treatment -- are in the statute. HHS of course takes the position that 404 is the controlling provision -- hence that Wisconsin needs a waiver. I am proceeding on the assumption that you don't want to contest this interpretation.

2. Anna Durand and I spoke late Friday afternoon. She told me that Mary Jo didn't want to agree to the language she (Anna) had proposed on the residency requirement. I told her that Jack has always had strong feelings on this issue, and there is no reason to think he will change them: he wants HHS to approve the waiver on this issue in exactly the way we proposed months ago. I also noted that we should just do the thing rather than write a letter saying we would be doing it sometime. She didn't disagree, but she's clearly not calling the shots here: she was going to go back to Mary Jo and call me on Monday.

1. No. Do you have a tape?
2. I thought it was pretty decent. You?
3. What's wrong with it?
4. I may be hard to reach tomorrow. I was actually picked today to serve on a jury.
