Chairman
Committee on the Judiciary
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

As you know, yesterday I unveiled a comprehensive proposal to strengthen our federal firearms laws in four important ways: by (1) expanding the successful Brady Law; (2) further restricting youth access to guns; (3) cracking down on illegal gun traffickers; and (4) strengthening the ban on assault weapons. In the coming days, I will transmit this legislation to Congress. I believe that Congress should be able to pass within weeks or months everything in this legislation, which builds on efforts that have proved highly effective in keeping guns out of the hands of criminals and youth. Consider some of the bill's specific provisions:

My legislation will extend Brady background checks to all gun show sales, as well as to the purchase of explosives. Justice Department studies show that Brady background checks have stopped hundreds of thousands of illegal handgun sales. Extension of the background check requirement to gun shows and explosives will strengthen our ability to keep dangerous weapons out of the hands of criminals.

My legislation will raise the age of the current youth handgun ban from 18 to 21 years of age. With ATF gun trace data showing that more crime guns are traced to 18 and 19 year-olds than to any other age group, this proposal is an obvious way of reducing gun violence across the country.

My bill will also ban youth possession (again, until the age of 21) of all semiautomatic assault rifles and large capacity ammunition clips with more than 10 rounds of ammunition. In 1994, you and other Republicans stood up to the gun lobby and supported the original ban on assault weapons, which applied to newly manufactured weapons. My legislation will prevent juveniles from owning these weapons regardless of the date of manufacture.

And my legislation will limit handgun sales to no more than one per month per person, so that gun runners, hiding behind straw purchasers, cannot buy handguns in bulk and divert them to the street. It will also help law enforcement to trace more crime guns to their source, and to crack down on gun dealers involved in illegal gun trafficking.

For more than six years, we have made great progress in reducing gun-related crime and violence in America. In fact, the number of violent crimes committed with guns has dropped by more than 25 percent during that time. Gun violence, however, remains a serious problem in our nation, and much more needs to be done. Passing comprehensive firearms legislation is one thing we can and must do to address this important issue. I ask that you bring these common-sense measures to a vote as quickly as possible.

Subject: Religious Liberties Protection Act

We have received word that Rep. Canady intends to move quickly on RLPA, the Religious Liberties Protection Act. In general, RLPA would create a religious free exercise defense to many state laws that are inconsistent with the religious beliefs or practices of individuals. In order to apply the law, the government would have to show that it was particularly important to apply the law to the individual with religious objections. You may recall that RLPA is a sequel to RFRA, the Religious Freedom Restoration Act. RFRA became law a few years ago but was largely struck down as beyond Congress's power. RLPA is intended to restore the major part of RFRA that was held unconstitutional.

The President strongly supported RFRA, and it was widely supported in Congress. However, some of the potential implications of the bill are now better understood. In particular, RLPA could provide a religious liberties defense to many state laws, including some civil rights laws, such as fair housing laws that prevent discrimination against gays and lesbians and unmarried persons. This result is not certain, but it is certainly possible, at least in some states. As a result, the gay community, supported by many civil rights groups, oppose RLPA as currently drafted. Last year, no Democrats on the House Constitution Subcommittee supported the bill after they heard from this community. Canady wants to move this bill quickly, and the Administration is going to have to decide how to respond. We will discuss the Administration's response to this bill on Monday at 1:00 in 472 OEOP. Representatives of DOJ will also attend. Can you come or send someone? Thanks.

Doug had requested, at the May 3 meeting, a mission statement for Monday's summit on school violence... Can you tell me whether one has materialized? It'd be a big help to me as I draft remarks for the President -- as would any other materials that are circulating. Thanks.

President Clinton: Making Our Schools Safe, Disciplined and Drug-Free
May 8, 1999

In his radio address to the nation, the President will unveil new proposals to help make our schools safer and drug-free including initiatives to: require counseling for students who bring firearms and bombs to school, promote programs that educate students on the risks associated with firearms, and allow more education funds to be spent on alternative schools, character education, and other programs. These proposals will be included in the Administration's proposal to reauthorize the Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act (SDFSCA), which will be transmitted to Congress next week. In addition, the President will call on the Departments of Education and Justice to work together and provide funds to facilitate information sharing on troubled youth between schools and other agencies.

Improving school response to kids bringing weapons to school. The President's Safe and Drug-Free Schools proposal will contain a number of measures to help schools prevent and respond to kids who bring weapons to school. Specifically, the proposal will:

- Require counseling for gun-toting students. Under current law, schools are generally required to expel any student who brings a gun or explosive device to school, as well as to report that student to local law enforcement officials and juvenile justice authorities. During the 1996-97 school year, this national policy of "zero tolerance" for guns resulted in more than 6,000 students being expelled from school. Under the President's new proposal, schools will now also be required to refer every student who brings a gun on to campus to a mental health professional for assessment. If the student is determined to pose an imminent threat to himself or others, he will be required to receive appropriate treatment before being permitted to return to school.
- Support programs that educate students about risks associated with guns. Although the current SDFSCA Program funds a broad range of drug and violence prevention programs, gun safety education programs are generally not funded. The President's new initiative will allow funding for programs that educate students about the risks and possible consequences associated with firearms and helps them to make safe choices and avoid injuries.

Dealing with disruptive students and helping to instill common sense values.

- Facilitate information sharing on troubled youth. Maintaining a safe school environment requires the forging of partnerships to share information between schools and other agencies that serve young people -- such as police departments, courts, and youth parole and probation offices. The President will instruct the Departments of Justice and Education to work together to identify more effective mechanisms for sharing information consistent with current law, and to provide $1 million for training and technical assistance on information sharing to educators, law enforcement, juvenile justice authorities, and social service providers.

- Promote alternative schools and “second chance” programs. Students who constantly disrupt classes and engage in fights make it more difficult for teachers to teach and for other students to learn. The President’s SDFSCA initiative will provide additional funding incentives to allow schools to fund “second chance” programs that enforce clear, consistent discipline codes; require counseling for problem students; and separate chronically disruptive and violent kids from the rest of the class by placing them in alternative schools and other similar programs. The President’s FY 2000 budget also includes $9 million for the development of model programs and strategies that establish consequences for disruptive students while keeping them on track academically.
- Expand character education programs. Current law prevents the Secretary of Education from making more than 10 grants per year for character education programs, and limits overall funding for each state to $1 million over a 5-year period. The President will recommend lifting these restrictions so that more states can implement character education programs that help instill common sense values in our children.

Helping communities respond to school shootings. The President’s Safe and Drug Free Schools reauthorization will contain his Project SERV initiative -- developed with the help of the communities impacted by recent schools shootings -- to provide immediate assistance as soon as a school-related violent or traumatic incident occurs, through:

- A $12 million Emergency Response Fund to help communities meet urgent and unplanned needs, such as additional security personnel, emergency mental health crisis counseling, and longer-term counseling to students, faculty, and their families. Officials from the Departments of Justice, Education, HHS, and FEMA worked together to help schools impacted by last year’s shootings. These agencies will continue to work together as part of Project SERV, and improve ongoing federal crisis response efforts.
- Crisis response experts identified and funded by the Departments of Education, Justice, Health and Human Services (HHS), and the Federal Emergency Management Administration (FEMA), who can help local officials identify and respond to community needs, help in developing a plan to address those needs, and assist in locating necessary financial and human resources.

The New Safe, Disciplined, and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Program

The Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Program represents the federal government’s largest effort to prevent youth drug use and school violence. At the White House Conference on School Safety, the President proposed overhauling the SDFSC program to provide more effective prevention programs for the reduction of drugs and violence in schools, more accountability for results, and better targeting to those schools that need the most assistance. Under the President’s new Safe, Disciplined, and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Program, school districts will be expected to develop comprehensive plans that:

Adopt and enforce, clear and fair discipline polices, such as zero tolerance polices for guns and drugs, school uniforms, closed campus policies, and parent notification and involvement.

Establish security procedures for schools which could include the use of metal detectors and to implement formal agreements with law enforcement officials to patrol school grounds and pathways to school.

Provide effective anti-drug and violence prevention programs, including research-based, proven effective programs that teach responsible decision-making, mentoring, mediation, or other activities aimed at changing behaviors.

Increase accountability by collecting data and reporting results to the public through annual report cards on the number and type of school-related drug and/or violence incidents.

Assess and intervene for troubled youth through procedures to identify students for evaluation and counseling; training for teachers and staff; and providing linkages between district officials, mental health, and other community professionals where appropriate.

Connect students to responsible adults in the community through after-school activities to extend the school day or mentoring programs, to keep students away from drugs and violence -- and out of trouble.

Develop a plan for crisis management that responds to traumatic incidents on school grounds, such as shootings on school grounds or drug overdoses.

Building on a Record of Accomplishment

- Funding comprehensive school safety efforts. The President's Safe Schools-Healthy Students initiative represents an unprecedented collaboration between the Departments of Justice, Education, and HHS to allow 50 communities to receive up to $3 million for each of the next three years to adopt comprehensive, community-wide approaches to violence and drug prevention. Through this $380 million initiative, communities will receive assistance to fund school counselors and other mental health services, metal detectors, officers for schools, and after school and conflict resolution programs by the start of the 1999-2000 school year. The President's Safe and Drug-Free Schools reauthorization proposal will help schools to engage in comprehensive community-wide efforts like the Safe-Schools initiative.
- Adding more law enforcement to prevent crime, violence, and drugs in schools. School resource officers provide schools with on-site security and a direct link to law enforcement agencies. Last month, President Clinton announced $70 million in Justice Department COPS Office grants to hire more than 600 police officers in schools in 336 communities across the country. This was the first installment in meeting the President's pledge made at the White House Conference on School Safety to provide funds for up to 2,000 officers in schools this fiscal year.

They are requesting that Potus be their last speaker which would close their program. They say that the sanctimony of the program is very important to them to uphold and that their keynote speaker always speaks at this time in the program. This would mean of course, that he would have to sit through the distribution of diplomas. They approximate that the program with him speaking last would be 2 hours (I say 2 1/2 hours given his probable speech length). Thoughts?
