Q: What about Welfare?

A: I think that I am going to be following what happens on welfare and I want to travel around and listen to people talk to me about what's happening on the ground as opposed to the abstract transfer of power, what actually occurs. And I intend to speak out about it, write about it, and if there's a formal role that would make sense in terms of reporting to the President -- kind of like I did on the Gulf War disease, go out and listen to people and write him some memoranda -- I always write him about the trips I take and give him a report, that's kind of what I see happening.
