Re: Update of outreach activities

Date: May 16, 1994

Public outreach has been one of the top priorities of the Working Group on Welfare Reform, Family Support and Independence. The overall strategy of the outreach efforts has been to be inclusive and open throughout the process but to communicate firmly the President's commitment to reforming the welfare system based on the principles he outlined during the campaign.

Since the creation of the Working Group, members have conducted over 190 meetings with 370 organizations, including meetings with children's groups, religious organizations, women's advocacy groups, nonprofit organizations, legal groups, fathers' rights advocates, African American organizations, Native American organizations, disability groups, child support advocates, social workers, organized labor, hunger groups, housing advocates and Hispanic organizations.

Attached is a chart listing the advocacy groups we have met. This chart documents the number of activities from July 1993 to May 12, 1994.

The groups have been divided by the community or interests they represent. Their interaction with the Working Group has been divided into two periods. Phase I took place between July and December 1993 when we conducted over 100 meetings with 200 groups. During this period, the purpose of the meetings was to inform the advocacy community about the existence of the Working Group and the framework the President had provided for the drafting of the proposals. The discussions were based on the four principles that form the foundation of the President's proposal. Please see the principles document in the general information section. Most of these meetings were led by one of the Co-Chairs of the Working Group; Assistant Secretary David Ellwood, Assistant Secretary Mary Jo Bane and Bruce Reed. Key staff from the Department of Health and Human Services, Department of Labor, Department of Education, Department of Housing and Urban Development, Department of Agriculture and the White House, when appropriate, also attended the meetings.

Phase II began in December 1993 with the release of the December option paper and draft documents dated February 26 and March 22. See a copy of the documents in the document section. These meetings will continue until the release of the official proposal. During this phase we have conducted 90 meetings with over 220 groups. The purpose of these meetings has been to get the groups' reactions to the different options under consideration and to seek their advice in refining the proposal. During Phase II the groups have focused on more specific aspects of the proposal, particularly the proposed WORK program, the minor parent residency requirement and child support reform. In addition, during this period financing options became part of the discussion.

Once the Administration's proposal is in its final draft, we are planning to invite all the groups back to meet with the Co-Chairs of the Working Group and discuss the specifics of the plan. We hope to host some of these final briefings in partnership with the White House Office of Public Liaison.

NAPIC          believes that work and          education should be          combined; taking place          simultaneously or          alternately. NAPIC          proposes the creation of "a          policy oversight body that is          business-led, within a state          structure and then          replicated in the labor          market."

The Working Group on Welfare Reform, Family Support and Independence

On June 11, 1993, President Clinton appointed an interagency Working Group on Welfare Reform, Family Support and Independence to develop a plan to implement his pledge to "end welfare as we know it." The Working Group, made up of senior level appointees representing six different Departments and seven White House offices, is preparing a plan for transforming the welfare system into a transitional support program that promotes work and responsibility.

The President charged the Working Group with developing a proposal which ensures that people who work are better off than those on welfare, that both parents fulfill their responsibilities to their children, and that expects those who can work to work to support their families.

To develop a plan that accomplishes these goals, the Working Group assigned staff to issue groups to gather information and develop options in the following areas: Making Work Pay, Child Support Enforcement and Insurance, Child Care, Noncustodial Parents, Post Transitional Work, Transitional Support, Private Sector Job Development, Welfare Simplification, and Prevention. The work of these issue groups is now being used by the Working Group in formulating a series of proposals for the President.

PUBLIC INPUT

The Working Group has made public involvement and input a top priority in developing its proposal for the President. To achieve this, the Working Group has taken several steps:

Hearings/Public Events – The Working Group conducted a series of five hearings in order to provide the public with an opportunity to present the Working Group with their ideas and opinions. The hearings were held in Chicago, Washington, DC, Cranford, NJ, Sacramento, and Memphis. The Working Group also conducted several site visits to model programs, county welfare offices, and individual communities, as well as focus groups with welfare recipients and social service workers.

Meetings/Briefings – Working Group members and staff have met with hundreds of advocacy coalitions, including women's groups, the business community, hunger groups, housing groups, religious groups, rural groups, African American organizations, Hispanic organizations, Welfare Rights Organizations, and Native American organizations. These meetings are continuing as the Working Group progresses with its proposal.

Speakers Bureau – The Working Group has a speakers bureau that has arranged for Working Group members and staff to speak at over 40 conferences in the past year.

Intake Center – The Working Group established an intake center for all mail and information requests. To contact the Working Group, please write to:

Charge to the Working Group on Welfare Reform, Family Support and Independence

"It's time to honor and reward people who work hard and play by the rules. That means ending welfare as we know it -- not by punishing the poor or preaching to them, but by empowering Americans to take care of their children and improve their lives. No one who works full-time and has children at home should be poor anymore. No one who can work should be able to stay on welfare forever."

-- President Bill Clinton
Putting People First

President Clinton has charged the Working Group to develop a proposal to "end welfare as we know it." The Working Group is guided by four principles underlying the President's vision for reform:

Make Work Pay -- People who work should not be poor. They should get the support they need to ensure that they can work and adequately support their families. The economic support system must provide incentives that encourage families to work and not stay on welfare.

Dramatically Improve Child Support Enforcement -- Both parents have a responsibility to support their children. One parent should not have to do the work of two. Only one-third of single parents currently receive any court-ordered child support. The system for identifying fathers and ensuring that their children receive the support they deserve must be strengthened.

Provide Education, Training, and Other Services to Help People Get Off and Stay Off Welfare -- People should have access to the basic education and training they need to get and hold onto a job. Existing programs encouraged by the Family Support Act of 1988 need to be expanded, improved and better coordinated.

Two Year Time Limit -- With the first three steps in place, cash assistance can be made truly transitional. Those who are healthy and able to work will be expected to move off welfare within two years, and those who cannot find jobs should be provided with work and expected to support their families.

Based on these core principles, the Working Group will be developing a detailed proposal that will not simply change the welfare system but will ultimately provide a genuine alternative to it.
