Summary

This collection contains the files of David Kusnet, Presidential Speechwriter and includes some papers of Liz Bowyer, Staff Assistant. The collections consists of drafts of the 1993 inaugural address, speeches on health care, economics, and other speeches from early in the Administration. The combined files of Kusnet and Bowyer are largely administrative in nature. A large portion of this collection consists of daily news reports, dated April 1, 1993 to February 17, 1994, compiled by the White House Office of News Analysis.

Scope and Content Note

The materials in FOIA 2006-0465-F are a selective, not necessarily all inclusive, body of documents responsive to the topic of the FOIA. Researchers should consult the archivist about related materials. David Kusnet began writing speeches for William J. Clinton during his 1991 election campaign. Following the successful election Kusnet was the chief speechwriter in the White House from 1992 to 1994. Prior to joining Clinton’s campaign for office, from 1985 to 1991, Kusnet was Vice President of Communications for People for the American Way. Prior to 1985, Kusnet was a staff member of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), coordinating communications in organizing campaigns, contract negotiations, strikes, and other efforts. His early career was as a reporter for suburban newspapers in New York and Connecticut from 1972 through 1974. Kusnet also wrote speeches for presidential candidates Walter Mondale in 1984 and Michael Dukakis in 1988. Currently Kusnet is a Principal in the Podesta Group. He is a contributor to the Economic Policy Institute and he also is a contributing writer to the Huffington Post, The New Republic, and New York Times, among others. He is the author of Love the Work, Hate the Job: Why America’s Best Workers are Unhappier than Ever (Hoboken, NJ: John Wiley & Sons, 2008); Speaking American: How the Democrats Can Win in the Nineties (New York: Thunder's Mouth Press, 1992) and several books from the Economic Policy Institute. Liz Bowyer, whose records also are present as a part of this collection, began her White House career as Staff Assistant in the Speechwriting office. She was also a Staff Assistant in the First Lady's Office until June 1995. After leaving the White House, Bowyer assisted Hillary Clinton with her book Living History (New York: Simon & Schuster, 2003). Bowyer went on to work for ABC television in New York City and is still in the communications and public relations fields. Every effort was made to maintain, to the greatest extent possible, the original order of this collection. David Kusnet's records contain drafts and research materials for the earliest Clinton speeches including the 1993 Inaugural Address and the 1993 State of the Union. They also include the first speeches on Health Care, community policing, and child welfare. The combined files of David Kusnet and Liz Bowyer are largely administrative in nature. They contain a number of blank forms, instructions for daily activities, President's daily schedules, and administrative memoranda from the Office of Administration. A large portion of this collection consists of daily news reports, dated April 1, 1993 to February 17, 1994, compiled by the White House Office of News Analysis.
