Biographical Note

Active in the Democratic Party as an advocate of minorities and women’s rights, Herman was hired by President Jimmy Carter in 1977 to serve in the Department of Labor as head of the Women’s Bureau. At the end of President Carter’s term in 1981, she started her own consulting firm. In and out of Democratic politics for the next twelve years, she notably served as chief of staff of the Democratic National Committee, working directly under then-chairman Ron Brown. In the summer of 1992, Herman oversaw the party's national convention in New York City. In January 1993, Herman became a special assistant to the President as Director of the White House Office of Public Liaison. After four years as OPL director, she left the White House in 1997, when President Clinton nominated Herman as the first African-American Secretary of Labor. In 2001, Herman left the government sector and has since continued her consulting business while also serving on various corporate boards and study groups.
